Court may rule quickly on recount

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court, faced with one facet of Congressman George Hansen's complex fight to save his political career, will decide by Christmas Eve whether the state improperly denied the seven-term Republican a full recount of votes.

On Thursday, attorneys for the state and Hansen appeared before the court to present oral arguments in the defeated congressman's appeal of the recount denial.

Meanwhile, Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones said in Idaho Falls on Thursday that it is possible his office will investigate charges of Blaine County voter fraud in the Nov. 6 race Hansen lost narrowly to Democrat Richard Stallings.

Jones said he was approached in Idaho Falls by "people who have an interest in that situation."

He said he told them that if he receives information detailing the allegations, there is a "strong possibility" he will order an investigation. But Jones said any irregularities revealed probably would have little effect on the election outcome.

Hansen supporters have filed a lawsuit contending 44 percent of the votes cast in heavily Democratic Blaine County came from people whose voter registration forms contained inadequate residency information. Therefore, those votes were invalid, the suit contends.

Rep. J.F. Chadband, R-Idaho Falls, has said a special legislative committee will be created to examine allegations about voting in the county.

But center stage in the post-election turmoil surrounding the Hansen-Stallings race was in Boise on Thursday as the Supreme Court heard arguments by Hansen attorney John Sutton and Deputy Attorney General Roble Russell.

The court included retired Justice Joseph McFadden, substituting for Justice Robert Huntley, who disqualified himself because of his involvement in Democratic campaigns.

Sutton told the court the partial recount Hansen financed revealed enough change in official election results to justify a state-funded recount of all votes cast in the November election.

The recount of 45 precincts selected by Hansen broadened Stallings' official 133-vote edge to 170 votes. Sutton said that 10 of the precincts recounted showed a trend favoring Hansen, and therefore, a full recount is in order.

Russell has said triggering a $20,000 districtwide recount demands that the trend be shown throughout the precincts covered by the partial recount.

Contesting the election through the House of Representatives is still another option available to Hansen. The deadline for him to file a contest notice is today.

Storm rolls east

A wintry storm that killed at least 30 people in Southern California pushed east Thursday after dumping more than a foot of snow on normally sunny desert communities.

At the same time, the fourth December hurricane in more than a century churned into life in the Atlantic.

Winter storm warnings were posted for parts of southern and eastern Utah, where three to six inches of snow was expected atop four inches that fell before dawn. Twelve inches of snow was reported Thursday at Mount Carmel Junction, Utah.

Schools closed in Portland, Ore., and the town of Burns recorded a record low for the date — 15 degrees below zero. Yakima, Wash., had its eighth record low temperature of the month, 7 below, but Georgia basked in unseasonable warmth for the fourth straight day. On Wednesday, temperatures in Atlanta reached 74, a record for the date.

In New Mexico, bridges at Paradise Canyon and Devil Canyon were submerged by floodwater as warm rain fell on the snow pack in the south-central mountains, the National Weather Service said.

In California, the Coast Guard officially called off the search for an 11-year-old girl who was swept away in a swollen creek, though county patrols continued.

A skier missing since Wednesday walked up to rescuers searching for him in mountains about 30 miles northeast of Los Angeles. Authorities said he probably saved his life by spending the night on Waterman Mountain in a snow bank, which kept him sufficiently warm.

In Florida, forecasters kept watch on Hurricane Lili, which was moving slowly southward in the mid-Atlantic. The hurricane posed a threat to shipping, but Gil Clark of the National Hurricane Center said it was extremely unlikely that Lili would threaten land.

Only three other December hurricanes have been reported since forecasters began keeping such records in 1871, he said. The Atlantic hurricane season normally ends in November.

Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., the desert facility where space shuttle missions have landed when weather was poor in Florida, was reopened Thursday after being shut down by the snow, which accumulated up to 16 inches in some places.

"Today we've got ice out there. . . . The sun is shining off it and it's really pretty," said Beverly Ashton of the Palmdale School District, one of several high desert districts that were shut down for the rest of the week.

Also thrilled by the snowfall were operators of the Waterman Mountain ski resort, 30 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles. A tape-recorded message reported 7 feet of new snow.

The day before, heavy rain and hail made Southern California highways a motorists' nightmare. Ten people were reported killed in highway accidents, including a pregnant woman whose two children were critically injured and a woman whose car slid off wet pavement on Sunset Boulevard, hit a tree and caught fire.

The Tom Bradley Terminal at Los Angeles International Airport was closed Wednesday after clogged drains sent water onto the roof and caused ceiling tiles to fall, but the mess was cleaned up Thursday, airport spokesman Jack Francois said.

Blazing Utah mine repels rescue teams

By JENNIFER BRANDLON
The Associated Press

ORANGEVILLE, Utah — A five-member team of rescuers was poised Thursday night to make a daring midnight dash to reach 27 miners trapped by a fire in a coal mine and unheard from since the night before.

The team was scheduled to set out about midnight, 26½ hours after the fire first sent smoke billowing through the central Utah mine, trapping the 26 men and one woman.

Their aim was to bypass the fire, located in the adjacent air-outtake tunnel, and work their way to the miners, thought to be holed up in a large chamber 1½ miles inside the Wilberg Mine, said Joe Abbott, a spokesman for the mine operator.

The miners were trapped about 9:30 p.m. Wednesday when the fire erupted in conveyor belt equipment about a mile inside mine.

Abbott said that if the rescue effort was successful, it would be completed in 90 minutes. The plan capped all-day efforts to cool the fire enough to allow rescuers access to the smoke-filled tunnels behind the blaze.

"We're still feeling a real sense of optimism that the men are alive in the mine, and that they have enough oxygen to last until we can reach them," said Emery Mining Co. spokesman Robert Henrie.

Abbott said the latest rescue attempt was planned after mine officials determined that the fire — which they had thought from the beginning was in the air-intake tunnel — in fact was burning in an adjacent air-outtake passage.

Earlier Thursday, another five-member rescue team tried to work its way through the outtake passage, thinking the fire was in the other tunnel, but was repelled by deadly carbon monoxide gas after going 600 to 700 feet into the mine.

Two of the rescuers were briefly hospitalized.

Abbott said the second rescue team planned to work itself past the point of the fire, pass through two steel doors and approach the fire from behind with the smoke pouring toward the entrance and away from them, he said they hoped to get close enough to soak the blaze with foam.

It was thought that would cool the fire enough to allow the five to make their way the half mile to the chamber, loaded with enough individual oxygen masks to bring out all 27, Abbott said.

At the same time late Thursday, other workers were attempting to punch a three-inch air hole from inside the nearby Little Dove Mine 600 feet into the chamber thought to be the miners' haven from the acrid, billowing smoke.

Dozens of soot-covered rescue workers slumped in fatigue Thursday night in a makeshift medical center established just inside the mine's entrance, where a rubber-like smell filled the air.

If the fire were contained, it still would take another 8 to 12 hours for rescuers to reach the chamber, as workers build barricades and seals as they go, Henrie said.

"We're still feeling a real sense of optimism that the men are alive in the mine, and that they have enough oxygen to last until we can reach them," he said late Thursday.

Frank O'Gorman, a spokesman for the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration in Washington, D.C., said the danger to the miners was from carbon monoxide and smoke. He said there was hope that the miners were alive, but he said the longer they remained underground, the less their chances for survival.

Kenneth G. Blake, 32, the only miner to escape the blaze, was treated Thursday morning at a hospital for eye irritation and smoke inhalation and was released.

American experiment heading for comet on Soviet flight

By JAMES LITKE
The Associated Press

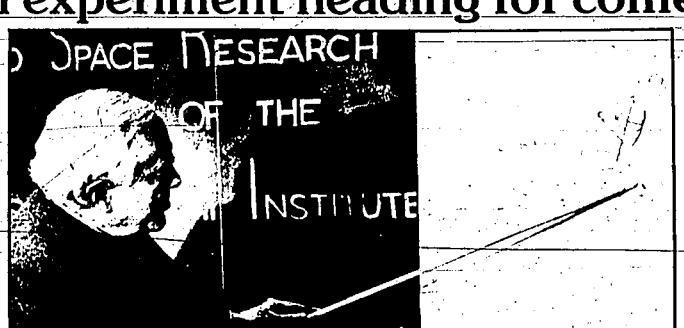
CHICAGO — In the absence of a U.S. space mission to meet Halley's Comet, an experiment designed by a University of Chicago physicist is aboard a Soviet craft hurtling towards the comet in an effort to help learn about the formation of the solar system.

"This proves we can collaborate on matters that are of importance to both nations," Dr. John Simpson said Thursday, adding that he believes it is the first U.S. experiment carried aboard a Soviet spacecraft.

"In addition, it is a chance to keep a door open between our two countries at a time when there is considerable tension in relations at official levels," he said.

Simpson said he agreed to the rare collaborative effort after delivering a paper on his new concept for measuring cosmic dust at a scientific meeting in Holland in September 1983. He received an invitation from the Space Research Institute of the U.S.S.R. Academy of Sciences shortly afterward.

He designed two identical shoebox-size instruments that will measure the mass and intensity of dust particles as two Soviet spacecraft pass near Halley's Comet in March 1986, Simpson said.



AP Laserphoto

Physicist John Simpson shows where his experiment is positioned on Vega spacecraft

The first analyzer is aboard the Vega 1 spacecraft launched Saturday, and an identical instrument will be aboard the Vega 2 mission scheduled to be launched Friday.

"So far as I know, the Saturday launch was the first time the Soviets ever opened up and said they would launch a mission . . . and allow photos of it to circulate," said Simpson. "We think that could be significant."

Data from the instruments will be shared by scientists worldwide and will enable them to determine the hazard of close approaches to the comet by a subsequent spacecraft sent up by the 11-nation European Space Agency and two more by Japan, Simpson said.

"Most people don't realize no one has ever seen the nucleus of the comet, and all we have are (theoretical) models," Simpson said. "This will be the first time man can get close enough to the comet to get a good look at what we believe is primordial matter, matter that belongs to the formation of our solar system. . . .

"That should give us some clues on how the Earth and the other planets were formed," he said.

Comets, made up mostly of dust and frozen gasses, travel in lengthy oblong orbits around the sun. A comet's brightly illuminated tail is caused by the boiling of those gasses as it nears the sun.

Halley's Comet was named after English astronomer Edward Halley, who determined that it could be seen from Earth approximately every 77 years as it swings closer to the sun.

Spy satellite flights keep owners informed

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When the U.S. space shuttle launches a secret Air Force satellite next month, it will mark only the latest phase of an ongoing 25-year contest in which the United States and the Soviet Union use highly technical space satellites to keep track of each other.

James M. Beggs, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which will rocket the shuttle carrying the military payload into space from Cape Kennedy, said Thursday night that he sees the launch as a business proposition, not a sudden militarization of America's space program for clandestine purposes.

To NASA, Beggs said, the Air Force is another customer for the nation's space truck, the shuttle, whose rental fees will reduce the cost of the program and free money for civilian space exploration. He said secrecy on the launch "is a matter of customer preference."

The business of overhead surveillance through the years has become an integral part of the relationship between the two superpowers. One reason that military satellites have been used so extensively by both sides is that they are less provocative than highly visible and intrusive manned systems such as planes and ships.

The Library of Congress has compiled figures showing that over half of everything the United States and Soviet Union send into space has military application, including photographing, listening, communicating, navigating, targeting, warning, searching and weather forecasting.

The U.S. military efforts in space have been marked by wide swings in the amount of information made public. At one time the government handed out press kits that supplied many details about U.S. satellite capabilities. Most recently, the Pentagon has strongly discouraged any speculation about the upcoming space shot.

More than 15 years ago, in this on-again-off-again government secrecy the once supersecret photographic spy satellite called Samos was displayed in the Smithsonian

Crime victims may receive aid

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones' 1985 legislative package will include proposals on crime victims' rights, public official misconduct, reporting of child abuse and prosecution of suspected child molesters.

In addition, Jones said Thursday he will seek only a maintenance budget for his office with the exception of $100,000 to increase the pay of his in-house deputies.

"The most important measure requires criminals to compensate their victims, as well as providing specified rights and protections for crime victims," Jones said.

Soviet official calls on Peking

PEKING (AP) — The highest-ranking Soviet visitor in the last 15 years, Vice Premier Ivan V. Arkhipov, arrived Friday for talks that diplomats say could revive the technical aid Moscow withdrew in 1960.

Arkhipov's visit signals a warming of Chinese-Soviet economic relations despite continued political and military differences. He is the highest-ranking Sovie official to visit China since Premier Alexei Kosygin met with his counterpart, Chou En-lai, in 1969.

Chicago teachers ratify terms

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago teachers Thursday approved by a 3-1 margin the contract that ended their two-week strike against the nation's third-largest school system.

Classes for the city's 430,000 public school students resumed Monday, the day after the Chicago Teachers Union's house of delegates overwhelmingly approved a contract that calls for a 4.5 percent pay raise and a one-time 2.5 percent salary bonus in March.

The contract was ratified by rank-and-file members 14,365 to 5,388, said Chuck Burdeen, a union spokesman. There are 28,000 teachers in the school system.

Suspects waive court hearing

SEATTLE (AP) — A former Eastern Washington couple arrested in FBI raids on neo-Nazi hideouts on Whidbey Island waived a federal court hearing Thursday and remained in custody.

As a result, the government has 30 days from Thursday to obtain a grand jury indictment against all four who were arrested Dec. 7 — Randolph George Duey of Spokane; Ian Roy Stewart, hometown unknown; and Robert E. and Sharon K. Merki, 49 and 46 respectively, who once lived near Oroville.

In a detention hearing last Friday, U.S. Magistrate Phillip K. Swelgert ordered Stewart and Duey held without bond. Lawyers for the Merkis waived their right to a similar hearing Thursday to determine whether the Merkis should be released.

Scientists locate immune gene

DENVER (AP) — Scientists have isolated one of the principal genes controlling the human immune system, a discovery hailed as a major breakthrough in determining how the body defends itself against disease.

Details of the discovery by researchers at the National Jewish Hospital and Research Center-National Asthma Center were published Thursday in Nature, the British scientific journal.

The gene isolated provides the blueprint for a key immune system protein called T-cell receptor. The protein controls the action of a group of white blood cells whose role is to rid the body of infected, malignant or other foreign tissue.

Blast, fire rip recycling plant

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — An explosion and fire ripped apart a tower at a garbage recycling power plant Thursday, killing at least two people and badly burning seven others, authorities said.

Several fires were still burning 2½ hours after the first blast, said Fire Chief James Harris, but he said most of the blazes appeared to be under control.

"You're talking to one scared boy," Blake said before going to the hospital.

The fire spewed carbon monoxide that forced the rescue team to retreat after getting only 600 to 700 feet into an adjacent air tunnel, said Abbott.

Despite wearing breathing apparatus, two of the five had to be helped out of the mine but were "perfectly OK" after treatment at a hospital in Price.

Later Thursday, drillers set to work in the adjacent Little Dove mine to bore the air hole.

"They will be able to feed air and hopefully establish voice contact" when the hole is completed, Abbott said, and also provide food and water.

Families and friends of the miners remained mostly at home and were kept abreast of developments by telephone. Henrie said a few relatives were believed at the mine, about eight miles north of Orangeville and 150 miles southeast of Salt Lake City.

Those trapped were trying to set a one-day tonnage record for longwall coal mining — a process in which machines strip coal from a lengthy area of a seam.

Blake, the general maintenance foreman for the shift, said he was at a head gate where the coal is dumped onto a conveyor belt some 3,000 feet inside the mine when somebody yelled, "Fire in the intake," referring to air coming into the mine.

Abbott said the fire probably started from a hot bearing on the belt drive.

"Everything was going real smooth as they were trying to set this world record," Blake said. "We had a good shot at the world record."

After the fire was noticed, Blake said he ran toward the entrance of his section, in the direction of the fire, to grab oxygen equipment. He put on a mask and felt his way along the wall to a power transformer, which he shut off.

Stumbling through the tunnel, Blake said he bumped into two men who were wearing self-contained breathing devices. Holding onto a water pipe, the three felt their way toward the fire.

They encountered other miners who were trying to block off sections of the tunnel.

Museum. The U.S. government apparently wanted to assure the public that it could keep track of the Soviets, an assurance that Congress demanded before approving the arms control treaty known as SALT I. Samos did not stay on display long, the victim of another swing in government policy.

Neither superpower protests this spying by the other. There is something akin to an acknowledgement of parity here, if no place else in the rival arsenals.

Under the Outer Space Treaty of 1967, the United States and Soviet Union even go so far as to disclose to each other through the United Nations when they have launched a satellite into space as well as its flight path. The mission and capabilities of these space vehicles are not disclosed, however.

The ever-advancing technology that enabled the United States, and later the Soviet Union, to load several bombs on one rocket and send each warhead to a different target has also transformed spy satellites.

One satellite can do a number of things from its perch in space, such as take photographs and transmit them to earth and record radio talk and telemetry. The old Samos was crude by comparison. It would eject a packet of film as it flew over the Pacific Ocean and an Air Force plane would snatch the film package out of the sky with a hook.

CIA may look into clashes between U.S., Nicaraguans

By ROBERT PARRY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency "is probably checking" the facts surrounding two reported clashes between CIA helicopter crews and Nicaraguan government forces, a White House spokesman said Thursday.

U.S. government officials, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, told The Associated Press this week that Americans under CIA contract exchanged hostile fire with Nicaraguan troops on Jan. 6 at the northern Nicaraguan port of Potosi and on March 7 at the southern port of San Juan del Sur.

In explaining the clashes to congressional oversight committees, the CIA said the American-manned helicopters intervened to protect specially trained Latin commandos, working for the CIA, who had come under fire from Nicaraguan government forces while attacking by boat, the officials said.

The CIA account of the Jan. 6 incident, however, has come under question by the House Intelligence Committee, and one official said the clash actually occurred when an American-manned CIA helicopter joined with one flown by Nicaraguan rebels to attack a Nicaraguan government arms storage facility.

On Thursday, Reagan administration spokesmen refused to confirm or deny the AP account, but White House spokesman Larry Speakes said: "I think the CIA is probably checking to see what the facts are."

Speakes also noted that one of the incidents cited in the story occurred nearly a year ago and the other about 10 months ago, and added: "So it's somewhat old."

When asked if the reported CIA actions would be illegal, he responded that CIA activities outlined to the intelligence oversight committees "would work satisfactorily under the law." He also said the committees had been "fully informed of all our activities."

If the Jan. 6 attack were an offensive operation, it would have violated agency guidelines permitting direct U.S. participation in Nicaraguan fighting only in emergency situations, one official said. The helicopter crews consisted of American civilians, some with Vietnam War experience, under contract to the CIA, the official added.

No Americans were reported injured in either clash.

The renewed interest in the incident emerged during the House committee's investigation of a CIA-prepared psychological warfare manual that advised Nicaraguan rebels on the "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" government officials.

Schroeder gets goodies, shaves himself

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The man with an artificial heart got an artificial Christmas tree and a bag of hometown goodies Thursday, then fed and shaved himself to show renewed dexterity after a series of small strokes.

William J. Schroeder remained in serious condition but was making a "slow, steady recovery" one week after three strokes stalled the progress he had made after the heart implant, said Robert Irvine, spokesman for the Humana Inc. hospital group.

"His appetite is good and his recovery from the stroke has reached the point where he is able to feed himself without assistance once again," Irvine said.

Also, Irvine said, "he has shaved himself for the first time (since the strokes) today — electric razor, able to do it with the right hand as well as the left, so his coordination has improved."

Time lawyers rest defense

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawyers for Time Inc. ended their defense against Israeli cabinet official Ariel Sharon's $50 million libel suit as soon as they opened it Thursday — without calling a single witness.

"In litigation, whenever you have the opportunity to quit while you're ahead, you should do it," Time attorney Paul Saunders said outside the courtroom. "We think we were ahead so we quit."

Time's decision to rest was announced after a recess, two hours after lawyers for the former Israeli defense minister ended their case.

Sharon, 56, now minister of industry and commerce, claims a 1983 Time magazine cover story about an Israeli inquiry into the massacre of hundreds of Palestinians was a "blood libel" against him, "the state of Israel and the Jewish people."

Arrests made in Chinatown shooting case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police arrested three suspects in a Chinatown jewelry store shootout that left one officer and two robbers dead and two other people wounded.

Los Angeles Police Department investigators were aided by the FBI and several other local police departments in the search for suspects, said Police Chief Daryl Gates.

Hang Cheong Chan, 29, of Hacienda Heights, was arrested Wednesday night in Alhambra, Gates alleged that Chan had cased the store before the robbery. Using the identities of the two dead suspects at the scene, police found five addresses that led them to Chan and the two other suspects, Sang Nam Chinh, 19, and Thong Nam Hyunh, 21, both of Rosemead.

Gates said detectives believe they have all the suspects in the case in custody.

Latest CIA incident is near to act of war

What in God's name is the United States doing in Nicaragua?

In this past year, we have learned, first, that the CIA was involved in mining the nation's harbors, then that it authored a Contra manual promoting assassination of Nicaragua political leaders, and now that American helicopter crews have exchanged fire with Nicaraguan forces.

In the latest incident, the American helicopter, flown by a CIA civilian crew, apparently teamed with a rebel helicopter to attack an arms storage building at the port city of Potosi after rebels were unable to knock out the facility by themselves.

Are any of these "defensive" actions, as the Congress requires, or are they over the edge of overt, offensive acts of war by the United States upon a nation whose politics it opposes?

No wonder the Nicaraguans think they're about to be invaded by the United States and no wonder they are suspicious of American pronouncements that the United States is not trying to topple their government.

Some of the more rabid Red-baiters in Congress will continue to defend this sort of stuff. So will the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, whose anti-communist political arm, Causa, has been active in trying to reestablish various Central American dictatorships, including Nicaragua's.

But we think many Americans and an increasing number of their elected representatives are coming to recognize that actions like this are dragging the United States further into a Central American confrontation.

Slowly, the Congress is responding to that possibility. Aid has been withheld, although the CIA and the Reagan administration have apparently found numerous effective ways to circumvent the law and direct other funds to the rebels.

What concerns us is that these incidents may just be the tip of the iceberg. We would not be surprised to learn that there are indeed invasion plans, at least at some level in the American government.

It hardly seems justified to us, at this stage, for American personnel to be involved in a shooting war with what is, whether we like it or not, another sovereign nation.

A GREAT TIME OF YEAR TO ANNOUNCE A POSTAL INCREASE.

Long-run costs will turn out less

Recent editorials make House Speaker Tom Stivers out to some kind of ignorant warrior against education and everything else that is the very essence of democracy.

While I must agree that Mr. Stivers actions are incorrect, I must also caution people who are pro Lewis and Clark State College not to descend to Mr. Stivers' level.

Mr. Stivers, I really don't know what your overall objectives are for Idaho, or for our democracy. But it seems apparent to me that if democracy is to work, government ought to provide an education to those who can benefit from it. Followed to its logical conclusion, it would even be fair to say that government itself, and thereby the entire society, could and would benefit by a more highly educated populace.

My thoughts are that more money ought to be spent on education. It may surprise you to learn that I am a conservative.

But doesn't that really follow the conservative message? Isn't it true that we would benefit economically, socially, psychologically, and intellectually if everyone has easy access to a college education?

It seems to me, Mr. Stivers, that you've missed the boat this time. While education may cost more than ignorance in the short-run, it will cost less than ignorance in the long-run.

Movement against teachings

I do not agree with David Nelwert's article criticizing Leah Coash, education director of the society investigating school text books.

There is a movement all over this land of ours against the kind of education our children are receiving. This is what Mrs. Coash is exposing. She is not doing as you say "injecting religion into our schools, severely undermining these basic principles of our American society."

Robert Dornan, a United States Congressman stated, "These days schools teach everything from T.M. to barnyard sex. They have spawned a generation of illiterates, order and discipline have broken down, even worse they are pushing a new man-made religion, secular humanism, which takes dead aim at traditional religions and moral values."

A book by Marshner, "Black Board Tyranny" states "A Book on Humanism 'Man, A course of Study, (M.A.C.O.S.),' teaches 11 year olds practices in Eskimo Life and encourages discussion of merits of life, swapping wives, infanticide (killing infants) and euthanasia (murder of the aged)." Their books "Exploring Human Nature, Biological Science Study and Individual Science Instructional System," all undermines moral traditions.

Their first books promoted socialism, the new ones endorse euthanasia and suicide. They tell that the promise of salvation or fear of damnation are illusionary and harmful. They believe that religion unduly represses sexual conduct and that "doing your own thing" (permissive) is preferable.

Mondale for one-half a decade, tried to pass a bill having Uncle Sam "rocking the cradle." It was vetoed. In 1971, there was reorganization and then 40 bureaucratic agencies were put with their fingers in the pie and spent $13 billion by 1973, and accomplished nothing.

Mondale did not approve private schools until his child got "roughed up" in a public school.

He was the candidate espousing the cult of the educational union indoctrinating our children into the Humanistic religion. The Supreme Court said, "It is a religion."

No wonder Mondale received a resounding defeat.

The educational system spends thousands of dollars to fill our newspapers full of propaganda to continue their exploitation of people.

This cult is trying to get us so dissatisfied with high taxes so we will turn to communism.

Our teachers are not guilty, they are the victims of this union. Our new legislators will experience harassing lobbying. Write to them and support them as they try to return control to the people and throw out humanism in schools.

Let us help pay tuition for private schools and let parents be free from state control.

Music brings back memories

Last night I was transported back into the past of Yuletide joy and the exultant spirit of youth!

My husband and I decided on the spur of the moment to attend the Twin Falls High School Christmas concert at CSI. It was more than worth braving the low temperatures! There's nothing more satisfying than just looking at young people — but when they're singing and making beautiful music . . . Wow!

The evening took me back to Illinois Christmases — and the annual Christmas extravaganzas we used to put on at Perry School (grades one through six.) I thought of Ray Hicks (of the nasal voice) who belted out "Good King Wenceslaus", wearing a purple, plumed, satin hat — of the Latin songs we sang, not having the foggiest notion what they meant — of the year of the mumps, when one substitute King after another fell to this malady, until our King was a tall girl with a beard taped to her face — of boys running from teachers who were applying makeup — and especially of our teachers who put up with all of us year after year!

God bless the young people! God bless the teachers!

Merry Christmas!

PAUL VOLCKER
Won't moderate views

Fed, CEA chairmen won't be quiet about deficit

Robert Reno

In the four years that the Reagan administration has been chiefly responsible for the economic policy of the United States, the Federal Reserve and the Council of Economic Advisers have been two of the most useful and credible sources of constructive criticism of that policy.

That has been a considerable embarrassment to the administration because neither agency is infested with Democrats or liberals who can be readily dismissed as partisan hit men. Indeed, both the Fed and the CEA have been creatures of the administration.

The problem is that neither has worked well on the leash.

Fed Chairman Paul Volcker was, of course, a relic of the Carter administration, but he was reappointed to a second term by President Ronald Reagan. And to the extent that Volcker's monetary policies were restrictive at a time when it hurt Carter's re-election chances and expansive when it was favorable to Reagan's re-election, it is difficult to argue that Volcker has been especially unkind to the president.

Yet both before and after his reapointment by the president, Volcker has been unwilling to moderate his publicly expressed concerns about the size of the deficit.

Over at the CEA, two successive chairmen of high reputation in the economics profession and solid conservative credentials, both of them appointed by Reagan without anyone holding a gun to his head, have each exceeded the administration's exceedingly low level of tolerance of public mention of the deficit. Murray Weidenbaum and Martin Feldstein both departed Washington professing loyalty and admiration for the president and his economic program and considerable horror at the deficits which have been one of its results.

Because Volcker, Weidenbaum and Feldstein are all appointees of the president, they have been excessively quoted on the deficit by reporters who find in repeating their words a refuge from the charge that they are but tools of the administration's enemies.

After all, the most biased of us journalists should have a proper concern for appearances.

And an ordinary concern for appearances would seem to demand that a politician who has built up as much political capital as the president has should not now squander it in a mean and petty vendetta against the CEA and the Fed. Yet there are unmistakable signs that the administration would like to recast both bodies, originally envisioned as watchdogs, into the more servile role of lapdog.

There has been no CEA chairman since Feldstein returned to Harvard in August. There has not even been an acting chairman. And there are reports that the administration would like to abolish the council or at least demote its chairmanship to a status somewhere between a rural postmaster and a deputy marshal.

And last week, Secretary of the Treasury Donald Regan suggested that it might be a good idea to curtail the independence of the Fed, which, he noted, is the only central bank in the world enjoying total independence from the government of the day.

All that suggests a sensitivity to criticism that is unbecoming in a president who has just won a huge popular mandate. It also suggests that the administration has not been able find a CEA chairman or a Fed chairman of sufficient stature to pass Senate confirmation who can also be depended upon to keep his mouth shut about the deficit.

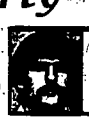
A single party — Democrats — dominates Blaine County



Rick Shaughnessy

State Rep. J.F. Chadband raises a good question when he asks, "Are elections illegal in Blaine County?"

According to an Associated Press report, Chadband — an Idaho Falls Republican and in recent months the chief elected water carrier for embattled U.S. Rep. George Hansen — says Speaker of the House Tom Stivers has promised to appoint a special legislative committee to look into alleged voting irregularities in Blaine County.

But what, I thought, could possibly be going on in Blaine County that would cause elections to be illegal?

I quickly reached into my left breast pocket and retrieved a copy of the only document pertinent to Idaho politics: the U.S. Constitution.

"Let's see," I said, mumbling to myself as I thumbed through the well-worn pages, "the 14th Amendment guaranteed voting rights for non-whites . . . the 19th guaranteed them for women . . . the 23rd gave District of Columbia residents a vote in Presidential elections . . . the 24th prohibits a poll tax and the 26th gave the right to vote to 18-, 19- and 20-year-olds."

There was nothing about illegal elections.

This strange breed of Idaho voter — the Blainco — must be ineligible to vote for some other reason, I thought, otherwise the always-right Chadband would be wrong. I read the AP dispatch further.

And of course, there it was: "Blaine County is very strongly Democratic," Chadband said. "They appoint the clerks, the election judges, the prosecuting attorney, the roving registrars . . . all under the dominance of one party, you might say, and its not being done correctly up there," he said.

So that was it. They're Democrats.

And clearly, the Constitution does not spell out a specific right for Democrats to vote.

Besides, these evil Blaincos live in a county that is dominated by one party — just like the Russian Reds.

Chadband, of course, is right: Those Blainco Democrats are a pox upon the John Birch sensibilities that are Idaho's mainstream political thoughts.

Without them, George Hansen would be the undisputed winner of an eighth term of media swashbuckling and congressional inactivity.

Never mind the technical flaws in Chadband's arguments:

Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney Keith Roark and Clerk Marie Ivie, both Democrats, were elected, not appointed, to their posts in the same manner as the Republican clerk and prosecutor were elected in Chadband's home county of Bonneville.

Never mind that Chadband and every other state legislator representing Bonneville County are Republicans while Blaine County will be represented by a delegation that includes five Republicans and (ugh) one Democrat.

Also you should forget, that — unlike Bonneville County — voters in Blaine County provided pluralities of their votes to legislative candidates from both parties, not just the party which "dominates" them.

These are mere technicalities.

What is important is that these Blaincos with their filthy Bohemian voting tendencies live in cities where post-office boxes — not street addresses — constitute an address.

There is only one recourse for such decadence.

After the Stivers-appointed Special Select Blue Ribbon Committee and Task Force to Crucify Blaine County Voters creates the voter fraud that both parties agreed did not exist during a similar witch hunt four years ago, then a new reapportionment committee can be formed to apportion Blaine County out of the Idaho Legislature and perhaps out of the state.

If Hansen's re-election effort cannot be raised from near death with this latest legislative scam, at least future efforts by Blaincos to spoil the partisan purity of the 2nd Congressional District can be averted.

With J.F. "The Exorcist" Chadband leading the charge, the evil spirits causing unrest and reason in the district will be expurgated and the void that was Blaine County could become the biggest mecca of Western tourism since the Grand Canyon.

Winter wheat plantings fall 9 percent from previous year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers planted 57.6 million acres of winter wheat for harvest in 1985, a 9 percent cutback from the 63.4 million acres planted for the bumper 1984 harvest, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

A record 66.5 million acres of winter wheat were planted for the 1984 harvest, and farmers reduced plantings to 62.1 million for 1983. They boosted plantings slightly a year ago for the 1984 crop.

The 57.6 million acres of winter wheat planted for next year would be the fewest since farmers seeded about that acreage for the 1980 harvest, according to USDA records.

Carl Schwensen, executive vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said that while "we're not stunned" by the 9 percent reduction in winter wheat plantings, it was somewhat more of a cutback than had been anticipated.

Schwensen said one factor was wet weather in parts of the Southeast which prevented farmers from planting on schedule. Farmer signup in the 1985 acreage program also was a major reason, he said.

Farmers have to agree to reduce 1985 wheat plantings by 30 percent in order to qualify for government price support benefits on next year's crop.

Winter wheat, planted in the fall for the next summer's harvest, makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production. The remainder is planted in the spring and is harvest later the same year.

"Acreage in the Great Plains is down 1 percent from a year ago," the report said. "Kansas is off 5 percent. South Dakota is down 7 percent, Nebraska's acreage is down 19 percent while Oklahoma and Texas are up 1 percent and 9 percent, respectively. North Dakota's seedings are up 21 percent, the largest percentage increase in the nation."

The report said planting of the 1985 winter wheat crop began "on a limited basis" in August and was 41 percent completed by Sept. 30, lagging the average pace of 51 percent. The delay was blamed on persistent dryness in portions of the southern plains and showers in the Corn Belt.

By Dec. 2, planting in the major winter wheat states was 98 percent finished, about average for that date. Stands were rated "fair to good with adequate soil moisture" across the nation.

Folding baby gates labeled hazard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Folding baby gates are proven killers that should be outlawed, and people who already own them should be warned of their potential for strangling children, the chairwoman of the Consumer Products Safety Commission said Thursday.

Nancy Harvey Steorts, presiding over her last scheduled commission meeting, urged manufacturers of the gates to voluntarily withhold them from the market until the panel takes a vote on the issue Jan. 9.

"It is essential that companies that make these baby gates do something immediately. We cannot wait another one or two years," said Ms. Steorts.

"This is a product used for several generations and I feel there are many grandparents and baby sitters who don't know about the dangers," she said.

Commission records show reports of eight deaths and 23 injuries to children ranging in age from nine months to 2½ years when their heads were trapped in the V-shaped and diamond-shaped openings in the accordion-style gates. One of the fatalities occurred in 1975; the rest of the deaths and all of the injuries reported to the panel happened in 1982 or later.

Commission member Stuart Statler condemned the companies that make the enclosures for continuing to sell a product he said has been known to be dangerous since 1982, when the commission first started studying the matter.

But attorney Aaron Locker, who represents three of the six companies that make the baby gates, said those attacks were unfair.

Bantam gets Ferraro book

NEW YORK (AP) — The rights to Geraldine Ferraro's book about her campaign have been sold for just under $1 million, and the former Democratic vice presidential candidate said Thursday she is working toward an April deadline with a collaborator who will make sure she tells all.

Bantam Books outbid nine other publishers to win the rights late Wednesday.

No figures were divulged by Ms. Ferraro, her agent or Bantam, but a source who asked not to be identified said the winning bid was just under $1 million.

Bantam said its purchase included hard and soft cover rights and also book club, serialization, foreign and translation rights.

Soviets plan winged satellite

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has announced the launch, orbit and "controlled descent" of a satellite that American engineers say is a prototype of a winged, unmanned spacecraft similar in design to the U.S. shuttle.

The Soviet news agency Tass on Wednesday announced the launch and return of the craft, called Cosmos 1641, and said it splashed down in the Black Sea.

The Soviets gave no details. But in Houston, Texas, James E. Oberg, a McDonnel-Douglas engineer at the Johnson Space Center said Thursday the mission was the fourth single-orbit test of the Soviet vehicle.

Oberg, an observer of the Soviet space program, told The Associated Press the leading theory among American engineers is that the vehicle is a one-third-scale model of a shuttle-like craft that the Soviets are developing.

Oil tanker train blows up

LONDON (AP) — An oil tanker train exploded Thursday in a tunnel 200 feet under the Pennine Hills in central England, creating a series of fireballs and forcing firemen to run for their lives.

Hundred-foot-high pillars of flame shot up from the tunnel through ventilator shafts as firemen sprayed thousands of gallons of foam into the 2,800-yard tunnel linking Manchester and West Yorkshire.

The explosions ripped through the tunnel after the 14-car freight train, carrying 100 tons of fuel, derailed in the tunnel, police said.

As the petroleum gas burned into the night, police evacuated 150 people from the hamlet of Walsden and nearby farms above the tunnel.

Kidnappers' demands refused

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The military regime said Thursday it will not comply with demands by kidnappers of the government newspaper's managing editor.

"We have always made clear that we do not compromise on cases like this one," said Francisco Cuadra, secretary-general of the government, who has called the abductors left-wing "extremists."

Sebastiano Bertolone, 38, managing editor of La Nacion, was abducted Tuesday night by three armed men as he arrived at his home in Santiago. Telephone calls and statements from the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front, a communist guerrilla group, have claimed responsibility.

The newspaper and a radio station received calls Wednesday offering Bertolone's freedom if three guerrillas who took refuge in the Swedish Embassy on Dec. 7 Are given safe conduct out of Chile.

More chemical found at plant

BHOPAL, India (AP) — Scientists at the Union Carbide plant found four more tons of poison chemical Thursday, including some left in the tank that leaked 17 days ago and killed 2,000 people. They said two tons of gas remained to be processed into pesticides.

The tank from which 40 to 45 tons of the chemical leaked Dec. 3 was emptied of an unspecified amount of the deadly methyl isocyanate and opened for examination by officials of India's Central Bureau of Investigation.

It was one of three tanks storing the lethal chemical at the Union Carbide plant. Officials said about 16 tons had been removed from one tank and that four tons had been discovered in two other tanks — including the tank that had leaked.

Gorbachev eyes arms control

LONDON (AP) — Mingling talk of nuclear arms control and trade, senior Soviet Politburo member Mikhail S. Gorbachev told British business leaders Thursday: "The United States must meet us halfway."

Gorbachev, on the sixth day of a week-long British visit, told a London Chamber of Commerce luncheon that Europeans and the world community are "daily growing more sensitive to the increasing tension in international affairs."

Gorbachev, 53, widely believed to be the Kremlin's No. 2 leader, conferred with Trade Minister Paul Channon after urging a 40 percent to 50 percent increase in trade between Britain and the Soviet Union. It currently totals $1.35 billion a year.

Rebels keeping holiday truce

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Salvadoran rebel leader said Thursday a holiday truce offer remains in effect despite what he called worrisome comments from military leaders in his homeland.

"Our decision remains valid and in force," said Guillermo Ungo, president of the Democratic Revolutionary Front. His group is the political arm of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the organization that links five rebel factions fighting the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government.

Veliotis may talk

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A General Dynamics Corp. executive said Thursday he is willing to return to the United States and testify against his former employer if he is guaranteed immunity from prosecution on kickback charges.

The Justice Department, the FBI, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Navy and several congressional committees are investigating P. Takis Veliotis' allegations.

Soviets deploy missiles

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Soviet Union apparently plans to deploy about 100 new medium-range SS-20 nuclear missiles, a ranking U.S. State Department spokesman said Thursday.

"There are at least 387 SS-20s now deployed," said Richard Burt, adding he did not want to speculate about when Moscow will reach its presumed goal. Burt is assistant secrtary of state for European and Canadian affairs.

"I think it is possible at this stage to suggest that the ultimate number of SS-20 deployments, based on what we know of new base construction, is likely to range from between 450 to 500 SS-20 missiles," he said.

As the SS-20 deployments continue, Burt said, the Soviets "are beginning new base construction for additional SS-20 deployments."

He spoke to reporters after consulting officials of the NATO allies about the Jan. 7-8 talks between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko. They are to meet in Geneva on a range of topics, including new East-West talks to limit nuclear arms and weapons in space.

Burt is chairman of NATO's special consultative group of nations involved in deploying 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles to counter the Soviet SS-20s. Most of the SS-20s are targeted on Western Europe, but more than 100 are based to the East and aimed at Asia.

The NATO missile deployments are under way in Britain, Italy and West Germany, but Burt would not say how many cruise and Pershing 2 missiles have been installed. NATO officials have said at least 93 are operational.

The Soviets broke off nuclear arms talks late last year because NATO refused to cancel deployment of the U.S.-made missiles. Separate talks had been held on intercontinental and medium-range missiles.

Reading from a prepared statement, he said the nations that agreed to deploy the NATO missiles — Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands — have pledged to continue with the deployments in the absence of "concrete results in (arms) negotiations."

Belgium and the Netherlands have said they will act later on final approval of the deployments.

Israelis stave off coalition breakup

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres' coalition government survived its first political crisis Thursday when it persuaded the Likud bloc to retract a threat to resign from the government.

Negotiators for Foreign Minister YitzhakShamir's Likud bloc and Peres' Labor Party worked into the night to reach a compromise on the allocation of powers between their allied parties.

Likud threatened to leave the coalition government because it said Peres refused to keep his promise to the Likud-allied Sephardic Torah Guardians, which quit the government Tuesday.

Pair jailed for threatening deputies

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A 36-year-old Jerome woman who allegedly threatened a county deputy sheriff with a gun and then wrestled with officers in an attempt to prevent them from serving a writ of attachment on the family vehicles was in the Jerome County jail Thursday night facing felony charges.

Cathrien Abram, 32, was charged with a felony, aggravated assault on a law enforcement officer, and with obstructing an officer.

Her husband, Earl Abram, 48, is charged with two misdemeanors, battery on a police officer and resisting and obstructing an officer. He posted $1,000 bond and was released from jail late in the day.

Mrs. Abram told Fifth District Court Magistrate Roger Burdick Thursday afternoon that she did not wish to employ an attorney. She also declined the free services of the public defender, but asked the court to grant a preliminary hearing. Burdick said he would set the hearing within 10 days unless the woman obtains bond and is released from jail.

Her husband asked for and was granted services of the public defender. Both remained in custody in lieu of bond following the Thursday court appearance. Bond was set at $5,000 for Mrs. Abram and she had not posted the bond Thursday night.

They were arrested late Wednesday after Jerome County Deputy Sheriff Dale Reddick went to their home about three miles southwest of Jerome at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday to serve a writ of attachment on the couples' three vehicles.

According to Chief Deputy Sheriff Larry Webb the woman answered the door and informed Reddick he was not going to take the vehicles, saying there were liens on the car and pickups.

When the officer attempted to explain that he had an order requiring him to take possession of the cars, Webb said, the woman reached behind the door of the house and produced a 12-gauge shotgun, and reemphasized her statement. Webb said the gun, which was loaded with three shells, including one in the firing chamber, and which had the safety disengaged, was pointed directly at Reddick.

However, the officer was able to push the barrel aside and take the gun from the woman after the two wrestled in the snow-covered lawn of the Abram home. Reddick then went to his police car and called for assistance.

Webb answered the call and another scuffle developed when Webb attempted to explain to Mr. Abram why the vehicles were being impounded. Officers said Abram picked up the gun during the original scuffle between his wife and Reddick, but did not threaten the officer.

However, when Webb arrived, he said, Abram picked up the gun and came toward him, causing Webb to grab him. This caused another wrestling match between the two. Webb said he wasn't sure if Abram intended to harm him but he was not taking any chances. Webb said no blows were struck by the officers but they were able to "overpower" the pair during the struggles.

Migrant program brings honors

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Good teachers are the key to the success of the Twin Falls Migrant Education program.

"The teachers that I have make this program one of the best," says program administrator Marilyn Knigge.

Working with 305 migrant students in kindergarten through grade 12 and four teachers, the Twin Falls program has been recognized as one of the best education programs for the children of migrant workers in Idaho and has been nominated for a national award.

"Those projects nominated for recognition from each state exemplify the level of achievment we are striving for," Secretary of Education T.H. Bell said in a letter announcing the award.

This year the program operates on a $158,121 grant from the Department of Education. Supplies, books, bus and food costs for the summer program, and salaries for four bilingual teachers and an aide, the administrator, and a liaison between the schools and children's homes are paid out of the grant money.

Bickel Elementary School Principal Lillie Brown, who was a child of a migrant family, says the program is highly academic.

"Reading and math are emphasized strongly," Brown says. Oral language skills are also taught, as most of the students in the program are Hispanic or Asian and may not understand English well enough to compete in the classroom.

"Each child is taken individually and worked with at the level they need," Brown says.

Knigge says the individualized aproach starts with a test to determine the student's standing in math, reading and oral skills.

Teachers meet with students in groups of four for one half hour each day as a supplement to the regular curriculum. In addition, the teachers in the migrant program provide their counterparts in the larger

Deputies cleared in probe of county jail hanging

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A police investigation into Wednesday's suicide in the Twin Falls County jail concludes that deputies of the sheriff's department "acted appropriately" in handling the prisoner involved.

Timothy Earl Courtney, 22, hanged himself with a bed sheet shortly before 1 p.m. in a holding cell minutes before he was scheduled to appear in court.

A resident of California, Courtney was arrested by State Police Cpl. Gene Bolton Tuesday morning and later charged with possession of a controlled substance — cocaine. He was also wanted by California authorities who issued a warrant charging him with auto theft.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Baxter said she received the police investigation report Thursday as well as partial results of the autopsy.

Dr. John Martin, pathologist who performed the autopsy, reported to Baxter that the victim suffered a fractured larnyx, an injury typical in hanging deaths. He said more about the condition of the victim will be known when blood and urine tests are available in the next few days.

Police reports also indicated the victim died of asphyxiation and that there was no evidence of foul play. The report confirmed the death was a suicide, Baxter said.

When arrested, Courtney is reported to have had a "sizeable" amount of cocaine in his possession — said to be less than 1.5 ounces.

Courtney was scheduled to appear in court at 1 p.m. and had been under constant observance from the time of his arrest Tuesday until noon Wednesday. He was seen by a deputy at 12:25 p.m. and found dead at 12:50 p.m. hanging on the bars of the cell by a sheet.

Baxter said, "I asked Sheriff (James) Munn the reasons his department would consider as the basis for keeping an around-the-clock watch over a prisoner."

Baxter said Munn listed several reasons and said that several reasons applied to Courtney's case.

The reasons listed by the sheriff, she said, included persons who are violent, homo sexuals, those with suicidal tendencies, those with serious medical or health problems, persons who ask for protection or those undergoing detoxification from either drugs or alcohol.

Baxter also reported the father of the victim arrived from Central Valley, Calif., Thursday to claim his son's personal belongings.

"The man said he believed his son was in this area on his way to British Columbia to see his mother who resides there," the prosecutor said.

County officials have called a press conference for 11 a.m. today to answer questions about the case.

State borrows YFCA space for counseling troubled youth

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Because of overcrowding at its Twin Falls office, the state Department of Health and Welfare has leased space at the YFCA building for counselors who work with troubled youths.

The agreement between the two agencies provides benefits to both.

The YFCA programs will be handy for treatment of the youths and their families, said Dr. Paul Ives, a psychologist with the department in Twin Falls. The YFCA, meanwhile, will gain extra revenue and help more youngsters in the community, YFCA executive director John Eschenburg said.

The YFCA board voted Monday to accept a three-year lease agreement with the department, Eschenburg said. The department will pay $475 a month plus additional costs for phone and other incidentals, Ives said.

In mid-February, a total of eight people will move into offices in the south wing of the YFCA, Ives said. The staff will be composed of five case workers, a secretary and two people who will work with the juveniles and their families. The health and welfare department will not be increase its staff because of the move, he added.

The department's office at Filer and Polk Avenues became just too overcrowded for the youth services case workers, who help juvenile offenders and children who have been abused, Ives said. There was a problem with confidentiality because there often would be two to three staff people in one office at the Filer Avenue building. The facility also houses the eligibility workers for many of the department's welfare programs and regional administration offices.

Since the department was placing more of an emphasis on treatment and rehabilitation of the youngsters, the move to the YFCA provided more of an advantage than one of space, Ives said.

Part of the treatment for the youths and their families will include participation in activities, such as the YFCA provides, to reduce stress and promote wellness, Ives said.

For example, foster parents employed by the health and welfare deparment can take advantage of the YFCA's youth overnighter. The children placed under their care by the department as well as their own children can participate in that program, Ives said.

The juveniles the department works with will be closely supervised while at the YFCA, Ives added. Juveniles involved in serious offenses usually are placed out of the community, he said.

Eschenburg says the two programs are allies, which was the main reason the YFCA board accepted the agreement.

"It's a chance to be in contact with youth we're not normally in contact with," Eschenburg said. "We didn't do it just for the money to be made. We did it for the type of services that will be available through that division of, the Department of Health and Welfare. We see it as another chance to help the youth in this community."

Eschenburg said that the department's programs or the type of youth involved shouldn't bother any of the YFCA members.

Since the YFCA is busiest during the early morning and evening, there should be no conflicts with the operation of the health and welfare offices, which will be open during regular office hours, Eschenburg said.

Burley's beer law faces repeal drive

BURLEY (AP) — Burley's new Sunday beer sales ordinance won't take effect for another week, but one of its harshest critics is already gearing up for a campaign to repeal it.

"I think we can come through with at least 75 percent," Vaughn Egan said of his plan to force a public vote on the measure in an effort to have it voided.

The ordinance has stirred a lot of debate in the Cassia County seat since it was proposed earlier this fall. But in spite of what Egan claims is overwhelming opposition to the move, the city council gave it final approval Monday with Mayor Chuck Shadduck casting the tie-breaking vote.

"One man made the decision for the whole community," Egan said in renewing the pledge he made at the council session to lead an initiative campaign for repeal.

The ordinance is scheduled to take effect next Wednesday, and Egan said that is when he will launch the campaign drive for the 366 signatures of registered city voters to put the proposition on a special election ballot.

"That will be no problem," he said. "We'll probably be able to collect that many in a single day when we get organized."

Egan also held out the possibility of punitive action against Shadduck and the three council members who backed the ordinance, contending they purposely ignored overwhelming opposition to legalization of Sunday beer sales sought by some merchants who fear Sunday sales outside the city are hurting their business.

"He can be recalled, too, can't he," Egan said of a possible attempt to oust the mayor. "We'll see what happens."

Former mayor Egon Kroll dies at 72

EGON KROLL
Pushed downtown reforms

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Egon Kroll, a former Twin Falls mayor, the president of Twin Falls Coca-Cola Bottling Co. and a civic leader, died Wednesday. He was 72.

It was under Kroll's administration that the city began plans and work on renovation of the downtown mall and development of the city's present water supply. Kroll served on the city council for eight years beginning in 1961. From 1964 to 1969 he served as mayor.

"He was probably one of the most active mayors I ever worked with," says Jean Milar, who worked as city manager under five mayors.

When Kroll took office, the city was using canal water for drinking water. Treating the water and maintaining the waterways were expensive and the supply fluctuated with the seasons, Milar says.

Kroll was instrumental in developing pumping stations at springs in the canyon and Alpheus Creek to provide the city with water, Milar says.

He was also instrumental in planning the off-street parking lots, landscaping and other changes on Main Street that revived the shopping district.

Thomas Nelson, a Twin Falls attorney who served on the council with Kroll in the 60's, remembers Kroll's no-nonsense management style.

"He ran a great council meeting," Nelson says. "He got down to business, got done and went home."

Nelson — and other former council members agree — remembers Kroll as "a really genuinely nice person."

Kroll began his career as a chemist with at the Bunker Hill and Sullivan Mining Co. in Kellogg. He worked at the firm until 1952.

That year he bought half interest in the Twin Falls Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Four years later he assumed full ownership of the company. He served as president and chairman of the board until his death.

He was also active in community affairs since he was a young man, serving on a good share of the civic boards in Twin Falls.

"As I knew him, one thing that always highly impressed me was the interest he took in civic affairs," Milar says. "He exerted himself for civic affairs. He had a strong sense of civic pride and civic duty. I admired him for that."

The DeMolays awarded him a Legion of Honor membership for outstanding community service, and the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club presented him with an award for "outstanding leadership and promotion of community projects" during his years as mayor.

Glenns Ferry road deal hit

GLENNS FERRY (AP) — In a case that could have ramifications throughout the state, the attorney for a Mountain Home contractor is predicting an industry challenge to a controversial deal by the Glenns Ferry Highway District will end up in the Idmho Supreme Court.

The Associated General Contractors of Idaho joined the challenge brought by Dodge and Wilson Inc., which claims the district violated state law by paving the parking lot of a local market in exchange for gravel from a pit owned by the market's operators, said attorney Michael McLaughlin.

The contractors contend that the deal struck between the market and the district amounts to the governmental body performing private construction work and is barred by state law.

But 4th District Judge Robert Rowett has upheld the deal. While acknowledging that the district may have used "extremely poor judgment" in setting up the deal, Rowett held that it was not illegal.

He found that state law permits trades like the one in Glenns Ferry if they benefit the taxing district.

But McLaughlin, now backed by the statewide association, said he will file a notice of appeal of Rowett's decision early next month.

Hansen board sells school bus

HANSEN — The Hansen School Board approved the sale of a 1972 school bus to Boy Scout Troop 67 for $3,025. Proceeds from the sale will go to the school plant facilities fund.

In other business at the recent meeting:

• The board appropriated $1,000 for public education efforts regarding consolidation with Murtaugh School District.

• The board announced receipt of $3,440 from the state Legislature. The one-time payment was sent to all Idaho public school districts based on October enrollment figures.

Recommended for "textbooks and related items," the trustees voted to use the funds for textbooks.

NPR funding to keep coming

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy plans to keep funding the controversial proposed New Production Reactor, even if money for the project is cut from the 1986 federal budget, a spokesman for an Idaho environental group says.

"According to one of our officials, DOE will be spending approximately $11 million on siting and reactor technology contracts in 1985," said Kerry Cooke of the Snake River Alliance. "Taxpayers are paying millions of dollars for studies on a project that DOE knows may never be built."

Troy Wade, manager of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, one of three sites under consideration for the New Production Reactor, said earlier this month that DOE could not justify the project at a time when other spending is being cut.

The breeder reactor, which would produce weapons-grade plutonium and tritium, was expected to generate up to 5,000 construction jobs and more than 1,000 permanent jobs. But Cooke said, "We've been saying all along that the NPR's cost would far outweigh any imagined benefits."

Truck overturns on interstate

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A laundry supply truck carrying an unknown chemical overturned Thursday morning along Interstate 90 on Fourth of July Pass, Idaho State Police reported.

Authorities said no liquids were coming from the truck, but there were some vapors coming from the shipment.

"There was an unknown odor in the air," a spokeswoman for the state police reported.

Gary Gaugl, manager of Van Waters and Rogers of Spokane, said the driver of the company truck was worried about hitting a tractor-trailer truck ahead of him, which was partially out of control.

The laundry supply truck driver swerved to avoid the truck and ther wheels got caught in snow along the side of the road, Gaugl said.

Jackpot casino set to launch bus service for Twin Falls

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The casino industry was born in Jackpot nearly 30 years ago, and for nearly that long, employees who commuted the perilous Highway 93 to Jackpot have dreamed of having a bus service.

That dream will soon be realized as the Cactus Pete's casino prepares to launch a fleet of 10 revamped school buses offering commuter service between Twin Falls and Jackpot to 800 casino employees.

Within a few weeks, the bus service will begin operating three daily round-trip rides from the Curry Crossing to Jackpot, with possible intermediate stops in Hollister and Rogerson, says Cactus Pete's publicist Carl Hayden.

The bus service will only be open to Cactus Pete's and Horseshu casino employees, with a $3 fee required to purchase a round-trip ticket.

"This is the first time that this has ever been tried," says Hayden. "Employees can now read on the way to work and doze on the way home. They can leave the driving to us."

The 90-mile commute between the Twin Falls area, where the majority of the 800 casino workers live, and Jackpot has recently been a sore spot for employees.

Inclement weather, a dangerous curve and drunken drivers have all contributed to a high accident rate along Highway 93.

In the three years before 1983, the rate of traffic fatilities on Highway 93 was nearly twice the average rate for rural Idaho roads. During the last four years, more than 17 people have lost their lives on the road.

Hayden said the commuting perils have scared away many prospective employees, who the casino would like to hire.

"There are those who are definitely qualified for jobs but hesitate to make the commute," Hayden said.

Five of the 10 school buses in the Jackpot fleet have been purchased and are now being revamped to make them suitable for adults, Hayden said.

Bus motors are being rebuilt, interior seats revamped, and outsides repainted with the Cactus Pete's logo. Bus drivers have been recruited and will undergo testing this weekend, Hayden said.

The three daily round-trip bus runs to Jackpot will be timed to coincide with major employee shift changes. Each bus will hold 38 people, with four buses running per shift, says Jennifer Bohling, a Cactus Pete's employee in the personnel division.

Bohling says that approximately 70 percent of the casino employees live in the Magic Valley and may want to take advantage of the service.

Hayden says that Cactus Pete's is also hoping to persuade a bus company to open up a Pocatello-Burley-Twin Falls-Jackpot line for casino customers.

Glenns Ferry teachers ask election

By DIANA HOOLEY
Times-News correspondent

GLENNS FERRY — A letter from the Glenns Ferry Association of Professional Educators requesting a special election be held to determine who the bargaining faction will be for upcoming teacher contract negotiations was read to the Glenns Ferry School Board earlier this week.

The association organized last year as a new group representing teachers and counselors of Glenns Ferry schools.

Glenns Ferry Educational Association representative Perry Parish asked the board that teachers be the only ones allowed to vote in the election.

Trustee Lee Presley told Parish he thought the vote should be open to all certified personnel of the school.

Superintendent Jim Garrett, after researching school policy, said teachers teaching 20 hours and counselors counseling 20 hours or more should be allowed to vote in this election.

Garrett said this would exclude administration with the exception of Lin Penner, the junior high school principal who does teach part time.

Board Chairman Jerry Bybee ended the discussion by telling Parish the board would hold a special meeting to discuss the details of the election. The board then determined the election must be held by Jan. 31.

In other business:

• The amended budget for the 1984-85 school year was approved. Board members agreed to transfer $40,218 from general fund to plant facilities to cover the cost of a new boiler system, a new bus and repair of the school's roof.

Garrett told the board the money being transferred was budgeted to defend the school in a recent lawsuit but was never needed.

• Bus Supervisor Bill Rodgers told the board vehicles parked in front of the school created a safety violation. He said an ambulance or fire truck needed during an emergency would not be able to get in.

Rodgers said this situation had always been a problem for the school and asked the school board about the possibility of ticketing or towing illegally parked vehicles.

Migrant

classrooms with special materials to help bring the migrant students up to speed with their classmates.

When it is time to pick up and seek the harvest elsewhere, teachers fill out a skill log book that is recorded in a central computer in Arkansas. When the student registers at a new school, the migrant program there can pick up where the Twin Falls program left off.

Though the bulk of the students in the program are Hispanics, other nationalities include Cambodians, Laotions, Vietnamese, Pakistanis, and Chinese.

Interpreters work with the teachers when the teacher does not know the student's native tongue. Knigge says the program seeks to teach the students self respect and pride in their origins. "We want each of them to be proud of his heritage," she says.

When parent meetings are called to introduce parents to the program, Knigge says the invitations are printed in the parents' native tongue, be it Spanish or Laotian.

Knigge also runs a summer version of the program that includes all day classes, breakfast and lunch for the children and a slightly more relaxed atmosphere. "Academics is the number one priority," but the summer program has included a swimming program at the YFCA pool, Knigge says.

The summer program is slightly smaller, covering only kindergarten through sixth grade with an enrollment around 175.

When the program was started in the summer of 1968, class was held in the labor camps outside of town. Previous administrators of the program have included Doyt Simcoe and Frances LaCroix.

Students are eligible for the program if their family has moved within the last six years across school district boundaries for the purpose of obtaining seasonal, temporary work in agriculture or a field associated to agriculture.

Eligible work can range from beat truck drivers to seasonal employees of Idaho Frozen Foods and the Amalgamated Sugar Co., sugar beet factory.

Valentine new chair of MVRMC board

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls accountant Robert Valentine will serve as 1985 chairman of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center board.

Valentine replaces Jack Claiborn of Kimberly. Claiborn will not serve on the board next year.

Other incumbent board members named as officers at the Monday night board meeting include Dave Munroe, vice chairman; Marge Ashenbrenner, secretary; and Frank Arana, treasurer.

At the Tuesday night meeting, the board approved the establishment of Magic Valley Regional Health Services Corporation. The corporation will serve as a launch-pad for revenue-producing ventures the hospital board cannot pursue.

Hospital spokesperson Trudy Tario said Tuesday the board of directors of the new corporation will include the hospital board, the hospital chief of staff and the county commissioners.

Plans for the establishment of the Remington Clinic for women's health at the hospital will be delayed until a medical director is appointed and approved by the medical staff, says hospital director of community relations, Sue Summers.

Hospital administrator Bill Burns and clinic founder Carol Remington are developing a job description for the director.

With the hospital-based home health service in its third month, patient referral guidelines have been established, Home Health Director Rosemary Laufenberg says patients will be referred to one of the home health agencies in the area based on physician and patient and family preferences.

Laufenberg says referrals used to be made on a rotating basis.

Valentine reported a hospital use review committee will be established with the chairman reporting to the Medical Executive Committee of the hospital.

Summers said Tuesday that Fran Williams from medical records will assume responsibility for the use review at the hospital.

Leaving the board with Claiborn are Devon Anderson and Doll Smith. New members of the board are Lee Odenwald and Elaine Phillips of Twin Falls, Lee Popplewell of Buhl, and Kent Taylor of Kimberly.

Odenwald is president of Idaho Frozen Foods Corporation and Phillips is the ex-chairperson of the Twin Falls Republican Party. Popplewell is a retired public school teacher and Taylor is an attorney from Kimberly.

Board meetings have been moved to the first Monday of each month. The board will meet in an informal retreat in January and will have its first formal board meeting Feb. 4.

Wild horses prepared for adoption

BOISE — The wild horses from the federal Bureau of Land Management's 1984 round-up have been freeze branded, checked by veterinarians and are now ready to be adopted.

All-day Saturday and Sunday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., BLM officials will open up the wild horse corrals to the public. The corrals, located five miles south of the Boise Municipal Airport off Pleasant Valley Road, contain nearly 175 wild horses rounded up from Owyhee and central Idaho public lands.

To date, the BLM has received about 130 requests for information about adopting the horses, but the agency has not yet begun to approve any adoptions, says Kris Long, a BLM spokesman.

People interested in adopting a wild horse must have adequate facilities, animal knowledge and financial resources to care for the horses, Long says.

The horses will also be available for inspection on weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4. p.m. The first people on the list of applicants will have the first pick of the horses.

The adoption fee is $125 per horse or $125 per mare and combination. One individual may adopt a maximum of four horses. After one year of humane care, they may obtain title to the horses.

For more information, contact the BLM Boise District Office at 334-1582.

Kimberly board names treasurer

By CAROLYN MILLER
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly School Board elected Mark Holmstead as treasurer of the board at its meeting this week. A resident of Kimberly, Holmstead is a member of the accounting firm of Evans, Condie and Holmstead.

The position is a newly created one for the board.

In other business at the trustee meeting:

• Superintendent Richard Bauscher addressed the trustees on the matter of the salary schedule and indicated that he felt it was important to encourage staff members to take classes to improve their skills in their respective fields.

Bauscher said any movement on the salary schedule would be evaluated in the spring.

He also said a review will be done in February of all administrative persons. Contract employees will be reviewed in March and non-renewable contracts will be reviewed in April, he added.

Bauscher said the College of Idaho is offering a class to administrators on evaluating personnel, which will be hosted by the Kimberly School District.

• Bauscher informed the trustees that the Driver Education Department had acquired a 1985 Mercury Lynx from Thiesen Motor Co. in Twin Falls. A $5 lab fee was collected from participating students, said Bauscher.

• A review of the Professional Development Plan was conducted by Bauscher. The plan will be finalized by the spring of 1985. The Professional Development Plan is an organizational structure for staff development in the district.

Bauscher said the members of the Professional Development Committee will assess the needs of teachers in order to provide in-service programs that will be of interest to them.

It is hoped the in-service programs will be available for credit, which can be used to satisfy the new credit requirement for re-certification, he said.

Some get an eyeful in dressing rooms

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: "Appalled in Boston" wrote to say that a friend had told her that some of the finest ladies' stores in Boston had peepholes and two-way mirrors in their dressing rooms in order to catch shoplifters. You said she was full of beans. You were wrong.

I was employed as a detective for a prestigious store in California, and I know there were peepholes and two-way mirrors in both the men's and women's dressing rooms, and it was common practice for store detectives to spy on customers in an effort to catch shoplifters.

In our store, males were forbidden to observe women's dressing rooms but there was no rule to cover the opposite. (This rule was largely ignored anyway.)

In some states, catching shoplifters by spying on them is forbidden by law, so store detectives have been known to lie and say they "witnessed" the theft on the floor.

I'm signing my name, but please don't use it. I am no longer in this line of work because I had some emotional problems and was caught shoplifting. Sign me..

— GOT AN EYEFUL

DEAR GOT: Too bad after getting an eyeful, you were caught with an armful. Many readers will be grateful for the earful with Christmas approaching. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I've never written to you before, but I couldn't let the matter of two-way mirrors in the best stores in Boston go without adding my 2 cents. You said you checked and were told there weren't any.

Well, I know for a fact that Bloomingdale's and Saks have this type of security. They even have signs in their dressing rooms warning their customers that they are being "monitored" by security personnel.

I have it on good authority that Lord and Taylor also has two-ways mirrors.

Come to Boston and see for yourself — unless they changed their policy since yesterday.

— STILL APPALLED IN BOSTON

DEAR STILL: I pursued the matter again — this time more tenaciously. A Bloomingdale's spokesperson courteously said there were signs posted in the ladies' fitting rooms that read, "These fitting rooms are monitored by female detectives." But no two-way mirrors are used.

Saks' security manager was equally courteous. He said the company had signs in all its dressing and fitting rooms that say, "These rooms are monitored by Saks Fifth Avenue associates." I was told there were no two-way mirrors.

After innumerable calls to Lord and Taylor, I concluded it would have been easier to talk to the Lord than Lord and Taylor's security manager. Three times I left my name and stated my business. Each time I was told that he would get back to me. I'm still waiting.

DEAR ABBY: It's possible that the Boston stores put one over on you, but they didn't get away with it in New Jersey. A woman filed a complaint against two stores seven years ago when she suspected there were two-way mirrors in the ladies' dressing rooms.

An employee revealed that not only detectives were looking, some of the store personnel also took turns looking. He said they were in hysterics when a fat lady tried on a bikini and did a little dance in front of the mirror!

Another time the men lined up in front of a peephole to get a look at an unbelievably well-built woman "everyone had to see."

— READS YOU IN PATERSON

DEAR ABBY: We have a problem that I'm sure a lot of people have, but so far I haven't seen it in your column.

Last evening my husband and I went out for dinner. This is a rather small town and we are quite well-known. The two of us were seated at a table for four and had already ordered when a couple we knew came in and spoke to us.

Should we have asked them to join us? We've done so in the past, and we always had to go through that embarrassing check-grabbing scene. One time a lady filled her handbag with crackers, French bread and packets of sugar.

Well, this other couple was given a table directly across the aisle from us, so we chatted back and forth. It was very awkward, and I've felt uncomfortable about it ever since.

Prices are so high these days, we don't always have enough money for four meals, and we don't carry credit cards unless we're traveling. What should we do if this happens again, as I'm sure it will?

— A LA CARTE IN ALAMEDA

DEAR A LA CARTE: If a couple whose company you think you'll enjoy comes in, ask them to join you. An invitation to sit with you doesn't necessarily imply that you will pick up their tab. (If they couldn't afford to eat there, they wouldn't be there.) Bon appetit!

Remington returns to board after OK

BOISE (AP) — Gov. John Evans has reinstated suspended Corrections Board member Kent Remington and dismissed charges of malfeasance in office against him after a special hearing officer found no evidence to support those charges.

"There is no question," hearing officer Ryan Armbruster said in his 25-page report, "that Mr. Remington is guilty of severely poor judgment and failure to adequately examine and understand the authority and obligation placed on him as a corrections board member."

But, Armbruster added, "Based on the evidence presented, there is a complete lack of proof of any intent to violate the statutory provisions, ... and there certainly was no evil motive on Mr. Remington's part."

Evans formally adopted Armbruster's report on Thursday, bringing to an end the three-month controversy over Remington's business dealings with the prison system he oversees.

"Mr. Remington had a full and fair hearing and he succeeded in answering the charges," the governor said in a statement. "The process worked well in this case."

The St. Anthony businessman had been under suspension from the board since Sept. 25 when Evans ordered an attorney general's investigation into a series of allegations that Remington had profited from from his position on the board.

The ouster proceedings began a month later when Remington refused to resign after state investigators determined that in one case he had in fact violated the state law barring any corrections board member or employee from having any direct or indirect financial interest in the operation of the prison system.

"I don't remember when I've had such a load lifted off of me," Remington said in a telephone interview from his attorney's office in Rexburg. "As far as I'm concerned, this is the end of it."

Having maintained throughout that he had never intentionally violated a state law or profited from his position, Remington had not only refused to resign but asked Evans to appoint him to a new term on the board when his current one expires at the end of this month.

Evans made no commitment on reappointment in lifting the suspension, and Remington said he would talk with the governor about that in the next few days.

But he already has the backing of Board Chairman Bob Anderson of Post Falls.

"If Kent wants to return, to be reappointed, he has my support," Anderson said in a telephone interview. "I'd like to have him back, have him on the board, but that's the governor's decision."

Court clears USFS from King lawsuit

BOISE (AP) — Five U.S. Forest Service officials have been dismissed from a federal lawsuit filed by singer-songwriter Carole King.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture now is the only defendant in the lawsuit, in which Ms. King and her husband, Richard Sorensen, are attempting to force the government to turn over documents relating to their Custer County ranch and its access road.

Ms. King and Sorensen are involved in a dispute with county and federal officials over whether the public should be allowed access to a road that runs through their Robinson Bar Ranch. The ranch is in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area near Stanley.

The couple agreed to a defense request for dismissal of the individuals in the suit. The people dismissed were U.S. Forest Service Chief Max Peterson, Acting Deputy Chief Gary Cargill, Sawtooth National Forest and Recreation Area Superintendent Allan Ashton, SNFRA Assistant Superintendent Deon E. Wells and SNFRA Stanley Zone Manager Pat L. Aguilar.

Stallings sets two for posts

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Democratic Congressman-elect Richard Stallings has added two Idaho men to administrative positions on his Washington, D.C., staff.

Stallings said he has appointed Idaho native Gary Catron as his Washington administrative assistant and Paul Pugmire of Rexburg as his legislative assistant.

Catron, who currently is working as a government affairs consultant in Washington, worked from 1967 to 1973 as press secretary and field representative for the late Sen. Len B. Jordan.

He returned to Idaho to work as an executive assistant at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare until 1976, when he returned to Washington with Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus. He served as director of congressional affairs for the Interior Department from 1977 to 1981.

Pugmire was press secretary for Stallings' campaign in the 2nd Congressional District. He graduated from Boise State University in 1984.

Fan tied to blaze at school

BOISE (AP) — A fire that virtually destroyed New Plymouth Junior-Senior High School apparently began when a malfunctioning exhaust fan threw sparks that ignited ceiling insulation, the state fire marshal's office said Thursday.

Investigators also determined that old timbers and accumulated dust between the school's ceiling and roof contributed to the blaze, and that firefighting was hindered by the temporary interruption of water from two hydrants.

Fire swept through the 46-year-old school on Tuesday, forcing the evacuation of 340 students and destroying the high school portion of the building. There were no reports of injuries.

New Plymouth School Superintendent Mike Jacobsen said water and smoke damage to the junior high area were extensive, and there is little likelihood even part of the building can be salvaged.

While state investigators wrapped up their probe on Thursday, the New Plymouth School Board made plans for the Jan. 3 resumption of classes. School officials hope to hold classes in quarters rented from churches and civic groups.

"There is plenty of space," Jacobsen said. "The question is whether it will be available to us." The initial response has been encouraging, he said.

Jacobsen said the school's shop, agriculture and music buildings also can be used as classrooms. The buildings were separate from the main junior-senior high school and were not damaged.

PUC foresees more hikes in phone bills

BOISE (AP) — While opposed in principle to the $1-a-month long-distance access charge approved by the Federal Communications Commission, Idaho utility regulators are powerless to do anything about it.

And an analyst for the state Public Utilities Commission warned Thursday that the access charge, to take effect in June, may only be a prelude to even greater increases in telephone service prices in future years.

Don Reading, who is studying the impact of price increases on consumer decisions to retain telephone service, admitted that the $1 charge by itself will have a negligible impact on the number of Idahoans with telephones.

"But the philosophy is what we're concerned about," Reading said. "The philosophy of why there's a dollar means rates are going to go up a lot."

He argued that the FCC decision to permit the access charge, which rises to $2 in 1986, is an indication that it believes a dollar here and a dollar there means little to consumers and that kind of philosophy will likely prevail on other rate matters as well.

An FCC study completed in 1983 found that Idaho could expect telephone rate increases of 85 percent in the coming years simply because of federal decisions, Reading said.

State receipts continue rise

BOISE (AP) — State tax receipts continue to run ahead of projections for the current spending year, even after analysts have revised those estimates upward.

But the increase in receipts over the new target is only marginal, and economic analysts said it should not be viewed as evidence that actual tax revenues will exceed the brighter estimates that added $16.6 million to the gloomy projections of last summer.

At the end of November, the fifth month of the current budget year, state tax receipts totaled $216.3 million compared to the target of $214.2 million.

"November revenue collections remain consistent with the trends established over the past several months," the state's monthly economic update said. "Although revenues appear to have stabilized, uncertainty still exists."

The increase over the November target was due to higher personal income tax collections, which were $2.7 million higher than expected. That was more than enough to offset minimal shortfalls in corporate income taxes and miscellaneous revenues.

The sales tax, which accounts for nearly 40 percent of all state revenues, was right on target at $90 million.

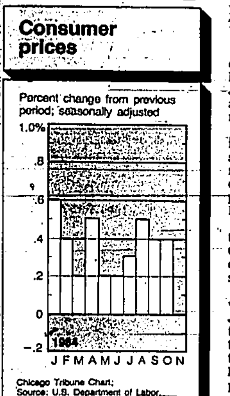
Easing gas, food costs curb inflation rate



By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices edged up only 0.2 percent in November, the smallest gain since June, as moderating costs of gasoline and food helped curb the inflation rate, the government said Thursday.

For the first 11 months of this year, inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, rose at an annual rate of 4.1 percent, only a slight deterioration from the decade-best 3.8 percent increase of 1983, the Labor Department said.

The Reagan administration hailed the November report as good news for Christmas shoppers, and private economists predicted more of the same next year.

"I see inflation continuing to be very much beaten back in 1985," said Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers. "Soft energy prices, international competition and deregulation have put downward pressure on prices."

The November consumer price increase was half the 0.4 percent gains in both September and October and matched June's 0.2 percent hike.

Food prices rose only 0.2 percent in November, half the October increase, while gasoline costs rose 0.4 percent, less than one-fourth the 1.8 percent gain the previous month. In addition, the price of clothing and new and used cars actually fell during the month, according to the report.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We've nailed inflation and it's the American consumer who is$reaping the benefits .... The American public can buy their Christmas presents without price increases."

Private analysts noted that the inflation report came one day after the government estimated that total economic growth, which sagged to 1.6 percent in the third quarter, rebounded to 2.8 percent for the final three months of the year.

"The recovery has gotten its second wind, but inflation is gasping for breath," said John Albertine, president of the American Business Conference, a coalition of high-growth companies.

Allen Sinai, chief economist at Shearson Lehman-American Express, said the slowdown in growth since June had contributed to the moderation in prices and any return of inflation was "far away in the future."

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said American businesses are planning to increase spending on expansion and modernization next year by about 6.8 percent — only half of this year's 13.3 percent. However, the 1984 gain is expected to be the biggest since 1966 and analysts were not surprised that businesses were scaling back expansion plans for next year.

In a third report, the government said Americans' average weekly earnings rose 0.8 percent in November following a 1.3 percent decline in October. For the year, weekly earnings, after adjusting for inflation, showed no increase from the level 12 months ago.

The Labor Department reported these details in its consumer price report:

• Fresh fruits posted the biggest gain in the food category, rising by 5.2 percent after a 1.5 percent hike in October. This increase more than offset declines in other food categories. Prices fell for poultry, down 0.4 percent; fish, down 0.5 percent, and eggs, down 3.9 percent. Egg prices have fallen 15.7 percent in the last 12 months.

• The 0.4 percent rise in gasoline prices followed increases of 1.8 percent in October and 1.1 percent in September. Even with the three monthly gains, gasoline prices were still 1.8 percent below the level of a year ago and 12.6 percent under their peak reached in March, 1981.

• Home heating oil prices edged down 0.1 percent in November while natural gas prices fell 0.4 percent. Electricity costs, which had declined sharply in October, rose 0.4 percent in November.

• New car prices dropped 0.3 percent and used car prices declined 0.7 percent, the fourth decrease in the last five months.

• Housing costs were up 0.3 percent, including a 0.4 percent increase in rental costs and a 0.3 percent boost for home owners.

• Clothing prices dipped 0.1 percent in November following a 0.5 percent October gain. Analysts attributed the decline to widespread price-cutting by retailers.

• In other major categories, medical care costs were up 0.4 percent and entertainment costs rose 0.5 percent.

All the changes are adjusted for normal seasonal variations. These seasonal adjustments are designed to remove predictable, periodic influences from the monthly price fluctuation.

Indeed, Labor Department analysts said that much of the November gain came from the seasonal adjustments.

In all, the Consumer Price Index stood at 315.3 in November, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $31.53 last month.

A companion index, the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, which is used to calculate various cost-of-living increases, rose 0.1 percent last month.

Some suggested strategies for taxes at the year's end

Sylvia Porter

Last in a series

Many of the highlights of the tax law changes in 1984 will apply to you for 1985.

These will not affect your 1984 tax return, which you are preparing to send to the Internal Revenue Service by April 15, 1985. But there are many tough new rules that may hit you for the first time in 1985.

Learn about them in advance so you can take whatever steps are possible now to minimize or nullify the impact on you.

CHARITABLE DEDUCTION RAISED FOR CHARITABLE USE OF A CAR. When a car is driven for charitable purposes, the standard mileage allowance for charitable-contribution deduction purposes will be 12 cents a mile instead of the 9 cents a mile allowed for 1984.

DETAILED RECORD-KEEPING REQUIRED FOR CARS, ETC., USED PARTLY FOR PERSONAL PURPOSES. Personal use of cars, computers, trucks, can result in a loss of tax benefits if not used more than 50 percent for business purposes. This applies to such property acquired after June 18, 1984. And for 1985 there is a further toughening of the rule.

You must substantiate the business use with adequate contemporaneous records such as logs of business use of a car. If you do not, you will not be allowed the investment credit or other expense deductions. If your return is prepared for you for 1985, the return preparer will have to inform you of these rules, and get a written confirmation from you that these record-keeping requirements were met.

If the written confirmation is not obtained, the preparer may not sign your return. In addition, if you have to pay an added tax because of a failure to maintain these records, you can be hit with a 5 percent negligence penalty. Look out!

ALIMONY RULES DRASTICALLY CHANGED. The long-standing rules for deciding when payments between separated or divorced couples qualify 1) as alimony taxable to the recipient spouse (generally the wife) and 2) as a deduction by the payer (husband) have been changed considerably for 1985. Check with your professional adviser.

The IRS does not look kindly on certain occupations. Among the more undesirable professions — in the view of the IRS — is "consultant"; the job can be defined in many ways, and subsequently serves as a "cover" for tax manipulations. Be careful. Do not arouse the IRS' suspicions.

ALIMONY TREATED AS COMPENSATION FOR IRA PURPOSES: Up to $2,000 of your compensation can be contributed to an IRA and deducted. And as reported in the previous column on IRAs, for 1985 all alimony received will be treated as compensation. Thus, if a divorced spouse has no compensation or earned income, a $2,000 IRA contribution can be paid in 1985 if the alimony received equals or exceeds that figure.

NEW ESTIMATED TAX RULES: For 1984, you could avoid penalties for underpayments of estimated tax if your installment payment was based on 100 percent of the prior year's tax or the tax on the previous year's income at current year rates and exemptions; 80 percent of the current year's tax; 80 percent of the tax on the actual income up to the month an installment is due, placed on an annualized basis; or 90 percent of the actual income up to the month an installment is due as though that income were for a full year.

For 1985, you can avoid the penalty only if based on 100 percent of the prior year's tax; 80 percent of the 1985 tax; or 80 percent of the 1985 tax on current income annualized. No other former safety zones are still available.

Also for 1985, if you are one of the few hit with an alternative minimum tax, the estimate must cover this tax also.

But if your 1985 tax less withholding is less than $500, there will be no penalty. Beware of underpaying.

Stock prices sag, trading slows

Exuberance keeps fading

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices sagged and trading slowed in the stock market Thursday as the exuberance of Wall Street's strong rally earlier in the week continued to fade.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 4.75 to 1,203.29.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange dropped off to 93.22 million shares from 139.63 million Wednesday.

Analysts said many investors suffered a letdown when the market managed only a mixed showing Wednesday after a 34.78-point runup in the Dow Jones industrial average the day before.

A reduction in the prime lending rate to 10¾ percent, first adopted early this week by New York's Manufacturers Hanover Trust, continued to spread in the banking industry. Open-market money rates generally showed only modest changes, however.

Meanwhile, traders kept a close watch on developments from the yearend meeting of Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries oil ministers in Geneva amid signs that the group was having trouble reaching agreement on a plan to avert a price war.

The talks were adjourned Thursday, and scheduled for resumption Friday, without any word that such an agreement was at hand.

Many analysts have mixed feelings about the potential effect of any further cracks in OPEC. They say the positive effects of lower oil prices could be accompanied by a negative impact on the international financial system.

Scovill jumped 5⅜ to 37½ and led the active list on turnover of nearly 4.2 million shares. A concern controlled by the Belzberg brothers of Canada began a $35-a-share tender offer for the company's stock, and speculation quickly arose that other bidders might appear at higher prices.

Phillips Petroleum, second among the volume leaders, climbed 3 to 55. A takeover effort by an investment group led by T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum, cleared one legal hurdle when a Delaware court ruled that a 1983 agreement involving Mesa did not prohibit the bid.

National Semiconductor, which reported lower earnings for the fiscal quarter ended Dec. 9, slumped 1¼ to 11½.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 3 to 2 on the Big Board, and the exchange's composite index dropped .39 to 96.00.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 115.61 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials fell .78 to 185.37, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down .78 at 166.38.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slipped .39 to 244.49. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 202.22, down 1.70.

Railroad defends plans for closing

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad shipping customers would be helped, not harmed, by the railroad's plans to close eight branch-line stations in eastern Idaho, a company spokesman says.

Dave Wheeler, superintendent of Union Pacific's Idaho Division, was one of six witnesses testifying in Blackfoot Tuesday night on the railroad's application before the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to close branch stations at Blackfoot, Aberdeen, American Falls, Shelley, Rexburg, Newdale, St. Anthony and Ashton.

Wheeler said closure of the stations does not mean that the lines will be abandoned. Railroad workers will continue to live and work in the towns, but the railroad will save money and customers will receive better service from computers located in regional "customer service centers" at Idaho Falls and Pocatello, he said.

The proposal is part of the railroad's statewide plan to close 26 station agencies. Freight service would continue to the affected communities, but customers would make shipping arrangements over a toll-free line to one of eight regional computer centers.

Mine delays stock offering

BOISE (AP) — Crescent Silver Mines Inc. has postponed its initial public stock offering until market conditions improve, President Jack Kendrick has announced.

The Kellogg firm, a spin-off of Bunker Hill Co., had intended to start trading its stock on the over-the-counter market this week, but Kendrick said poor silver prices and a lackluster market for initial public stock offerings caused the delay.

An ounce of silver brought only $6.30 on the market Wednesday, significantly lower than its average $11.44-an-ounce price in 1983, he said.

Kendrick said the investor market for initial public stock offerings also was down because of some bad experiences. "There was a rash of initial public stock offerings — most of the high-tech companies — in 1983. A lot of those stocks have declined 40 to 50 percent."

Utility proposing to retain structure

BOISE (AP) — Utah Power and Light representatives say ratepayers will benefit if the Idaho Public Utilities Commission allows the company to maintain its current capital structure.

Company spokesman John Droubay testified Thursday before the Idaho PUC in a re-hearing on UP&L's capital structure and tax cushion.

In a September decision, the PUC decided to calculate UP&L's need for revenue based on a hypothetical mix of stocks and bonds the commision thinks the company should have to best serve ratepayers, said Pete Richardson, PUC attorney.

Droubay said in prepared testimony that "it's very damaging that the commission has adopted a capital structure far different than the actual capital structure of the company — one that is outdated and inadequate to protect bond ratings in the 1980s."

The commission agreed to rehear the capital structure issue because it wanted to know if UP&L's involvement in the Intermountain Power Project, a coal-fired power plant being built in southern Utah, has affected the company's financial strucutre. The company owns about 4 percent of the project.

Droubay said if the commission allows recognition of the 4 percent debt in the company's capital structure, the company would be allowed a higher return of equity — or money received from ratepayers.

In the tax cushion issue, the commision ordered UP&L to return to ratepayers, over a five-year period some $15 million in cash the company accumulated as a tax cushion. The commission decided to rehear the issue to determine if the money is a tax investment credit the utility is allowed under federal law.

UT&L spokesman Orin Colby Jr. said $10 million was an investment tax credit and about $5 million was money set aside to pay taxes.

Accountant Gerald Monson said UP&L sets aside money to pay additional taxes the Internal Revenue Service might find. The commission disagreed with the amount the company held in reserve, he said.

Agricultural imports to rise slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agricultural imports are expected to rise slightly in the fiscal year that began on Oct. 1, says the Agriculture Department.

An annual report shows that imports are projected at $19 billion, compared with about $18.9 billion in 1983-84.

Farm exports, on the other hand, will decline to about $36.5 billion from $38 billion last year.

The department said recently that the figures indicate a 1984-85 agricultural trade balance — exports over imports — of $17.5 billion, down 8 percent from 1983-84.

BYU goes for Michigan, lock on No. 1 spot

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Brigham Young, the only major college football team to win all its games, will try and win the hearts — and votes — of as many pollsters as possible today when it meets Michigan in the Holiday Bowl, the first time the nation's No. 1 team has played in anything but a New Year's bowl.

Although the Cougars are 12-0 and have been ranked first in the last three weekly Associated Press polls, a storm has arisen over their credentials as possible national champions. Win or lose against 6-5 Michigan, the uproar will only increase from the critics, led by the Orange Bowl, which has been booming its game between second-ranked Oklahoma and No. 4 Washington for the national championship.

As champions of the Western Athletic Conference for the ninth year in a row, BYU again was committed to the seven-year-old Holiday Bowl, which never has had anyone else as the host team.

The only other time BYU brought an undefeated team to the Holiday Bowl was in 1979 when the Cougars were 11-0 and ranked ninth but lost to Indiana 38-37.

"In 1979, I didn't think we had the No. 1 team in the country," said Coach LaVell Edwards. "This year, we can line up and play with anybody. I think this is the best BYU team ever. It may not be the most talented — last year's was the best offensive club we've ever had — but it's the best 'team.' They have a genuine fondness for each other. And the defense is what sets this team apart from some of our other teams.

"It's been by far the most enjoyable year I've ever spent in coaching (BYU is 117-37-1 in Edwards' 13 seasons as head coach) and not just because we're No. 1. Win or lose Friday night is not going to change the attitude I have for this team."

Brigham Young will send its sophisticated ball-control passing attack, which led the nation in total offense (486.5 yards per game) and passing (346.2) and finished second in scoring (36.0) against an unranked Michigan team which sports the poorest record in Coach Bo Schembechler's 16 seasons.

Nevertheless, Schembechler, said the Wolverines will "call on all the resources of our 'Michigan Tradition' to play hard and play to win. We think we have something special to offer in this game and that is that we feel we have an opportunity to beat Brigham Young."

Schembechler points to Michigan's success against some of the nation's top-ranked passing teams. The Wolverines opened their season by holding No. 1-ranked Miami to 228 passing yards (the Hurricanes went on to average 318.8) and intercepting Bernie Kosar six times — he completed only 10 of 38 — in a 22-14 upset. They were burned for 269 yards by Illinois — which averaged 284.5 — but intercepted three passes and won the game 26-18.

"I think we are pretty well-schooled to handle that type of assignment," Schembechler said. "We are not unaccustomed to meeting a fine passing team."

Edwards listed BYU's keys as follows:

"First, we have to play very well on defense and prevent them from keeping the ball away from us for a long length of time. Second, the kicking game. Third, we can't turn the ball over."

For the most part, the low-key, easy-going Edwards has kept BYU's lofty ranking in perspective. He has not talked much about how good his team is except when someone has hinted that perhaps the Cougars don't belong at the head of the class.

"I don't think we have to blow Michigan out to finish No. 1," said Edwards. "Looking good will probably help, but if you win, you win. I do believe that if we win this football game, we should and will be ranked No. 1."

Group proposes title match

NEW YORK (AP) — Plans for a post-bowl national championship college football game were unveiled Thursday by a group claiming such a game could generate $10 million in revenues and more than $2 million for postgraduate scholarships.

"The country wants a national champion to emerge from the field rather than the polls," said Richie Phillips, executive director of the newly formed National Collegiate Football Foundation, a non-profit organization seeking to stage the game.

"I agree with that concept. Football is the only sport without a played-for national champion," said Phillips, a Philadelphia lawyer who serves as counsel to major league baseball umpires and National Basketball Association officials.

"Many people have talked about establishing a playoff system but it is too cumbersome and unworkable. That is the only reason the nation has been deprived of a champion," he said.

Indian girls down Jerome

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

BUHL — It wasn't a very pretty win.

Heidi Brenden scored 14 points leading the Buhl Indians to a 47-39 South-Central Idaho Conference girls basketball victory over the Jerome Tigers Thursday night. The victory was the 12th straight for the Indians and gave them sole possession of the SCIC lead.

Buhl boosted its record to 3-0 against Fourth District opponents, giving the Indians a leg up on the No. 1 seeding for the district tournament. The loss was the first for Jerome against Fourth District foes.

"After the game I told the girls what (former UCLA Coach) John Wooden said: 'Enjoy your victories because they may be few and far between,'" said Buhl Coach Janet Smutny.

The game was a physical battle with both teams going to the charity stripe nearly 30 times apiece, allowing very little time for field goals.

Buhl only made two from the field in the first period and three in the fourth quarter. The Tigers didn't fare much better, hitting two from the field in the first quarter and one in the third quarter.

The Indians jumped to a 6-1 lead after Lori Jagels and Ann Hamilton hit a pair of free throws apiece.

Tiffany Crist's two baskets for Jerome tied the contest 6-6. That was the closest Jerome would come.

In the second period, Buhl boosted its lead to 15-12 and stretched it to a six-point advantage after a Jagels basket and a Holly Juker free throw.

In the third quarter, Buhl took control, outscoring Jerome 14-9.

With 5-11 center Margaret Bengoechea on the Jerome bench with four fouls, the Indians moved the ball into Brenden, a 6-1 junior, who scored two lay-ups, putting Buhl up by nine.

Late in the quarter, Juker came off the bench, scored a pair of baskets and boosted Buhl's lead to 33-20.

In the fourth quarter, Buhl held a comfortable lead as Bengoechea and Felicity Blom remained in foul trouble for Jerome. Buhl took advantage of the smaller Tiger team and worked the ball inside to Brenden and Hamilton.

Jerome Coach Kurt Bradley had seen enough and sent Bengochea back into the game to cut the height advantage.

Bengochea drove to the basket and scored four straight points cutting the Indian lead to 39-31.

With Jerome closing in on the lead, the Indians put the ball right back into the middle. Brenden scored a pair of baskets putting the lead back to eight points.

Hamilton iced the game with 1:30 left by hitting a pair of free throws giving the Indians a 45-31 lead.

Second half proves decisive as Skyline defeats Bruin girls

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Skyline shrugged off a five-point halftime deficit just in time to capitalize on poor shooting by Twin Falls to win 47-37 in Gem State Conference girls basketball.

The Bruins, looking for an early Christmas present, looked as if they'd pull it off in that first half. An improved man-to-man defense almost stifled the Grizzlies, who had to settle for 20-percent shooting from the field.

"Twin Falls always does this to us. It's a long bus trip down here," he said. "It's been a hectic week for the girls and I think they're just tired. They just came out flat."

Something definitely went wrong for the Grizzlies in the first period. Bruin center Karie Willey hit a bank shot on an inbounded pass within seconds of the game commencing, then watched as teammates Mailin Miller hit Renae Plankey with an assist to make it 4-0. Skyline center Heather McCaulay, Willey's assignment on defense, put up her first bucket of the night to get the Grizzlies on the board at the 3:33 mark.

It was a similar situation in the second period, as turnovers went against the visitors and shots wouldn't go through the iron. Stretches of minutes at a time elapsed before the Grizzlies would score, while Twin Falls' never-say-quit offense methodically built a lead.

But then came that third period which changed everything.

"Our field percentage had to be terrible," Twin Falls Coach Paul Stover said of his club's second-half play. "We just didn't put the ball in. Although we've played harder than I've ever seen so far, we were just intimidated for some reason by the defense. The bad thing was, the defense wasn't that tough." Skyline ran a 2-3 zone all night.

The Grizzlies posted 15 points in the first 16 minutes of play, their second-worst first-half effort in nine outings. But the third period was decisive, as Skyline pumped in 18 points to the Bruins' six.

The final period had the clubs trading buckets, with the margin fluctuating between five and 10. The closest Twin got in the final period was on Amber Welty's field goal with 5:30 left, making it 37-32.

With guard Kori Coates providing a screen on the Grizzlies' next drive, Kathy DiLorenzo went around her for a baseline layin, and any hope of a Bruin comeback was probably sunk.

Leading scorers for the Grizzlies were McCaulay and Stephanie DeMott, both of whom had 12. High for the Bruins was Willey, with 10.

The Bruins' record drops to 6-5 overall and 2-4 in the league. The Grizzlies are now 6-3 and 5-2.

Wild-card ballclubs insist they're legit

By The Associated Press

When the National Football League's wild-card playoff games start this weekend, it may be easy to dismiss the four teams involved — they all lost their final regular season games and the New York Giants and Seattle Seahawks lost their last two.

But that's not the way the participants look at it.

"The hottest team gets to the Super Bowl," said Seattle safety Kenny Easley, who was named the National Football League's top defensive player this week. "The San Francisco 49ers are probably the best team, but the hottest team is the team with the best chance."

"You don't back into the NFL playoffs," said quarterback Phil Simms of the Giants, who qualified for their berth when the Miami Dolphins eliminated the Dallas Cowboys Monday night. "So what, we might not be the best team in football. We deserve to be in there and I'm glad we are. This is what we worked for since July."

The Seahawks, who finished 12-4, lost 31-14 to Denver last Saturday, costing them the American Conference West title. But they will be at home Saturday to the Los Angeles Raiders in the AFC wild-card game because the Raiders also lost last weekend — 13-7 at home to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Giants, meanwhile, lost 10-3 to the New Orleans Saints in a game that because of the intricacies of the NFL's tiebreaking procedures didn't affect their playoff chances. Now they travel to Anaheim, Calif. Sunday to meet the Los Angeles Rams, who lost their last game, 19-16 at San Francisco last Friday night.

The Seahawks and Raiders know each other well — this will be the sixth time they've met in the past two years.

Last year, Seattle won the two regular-season contests, but the Raiders won the one that counted most, 30-14 in the AFC championship game that propelled them on to victory in the Super Bowl. This season, the teams have split — the Raiders won 28-14 at home, then lost at Seattle 17-14.

Not surprisingly, the Raiders, 11-5 in the regular season, have decided to go with experience for the playoffs — Jim Plunkett, who led the team to Super Bowl titles in 1980 and last year, will be at quarterback in place of Marc Wilson, who started both regular-season games against the Seahawks.

"I feel Jim's experience is vital," said Coach Tom Flores. "I just feel, at this stage, he would be the best to go with even though he is still a little rusty."

Seattle's Chuck Knox, meanwhile, is more concerned with his team's lackluster performances against Kansas City and Denver following eight straight victories.

"What we need to do this week is regroup," he said. "We need to get back and start playing like we were when we were on our winning streak. This is a new season. It's sudden death now."

The winner will travel to Miami to face the Dolphins next Saturday.

The Giants, who finished at 9-7, played a horrible game when they lost to the Rams 33-12 at Anaheim in September, surrendering a league record three safeties in the third period.

"If anybody on the team wishes they could replay one game that would be it," said running back Rob Carpenter. "It's lucky we'll get a chance to redeem ourselves."

Rams Coach John Robinson said, "It certainly would be a tragedy" if the Giants' earlier ineptitude made his team overconfident Sunday.

"That game was a long time ago. It feels like it was six years ago," he said. "The Giants, over the course of the season have beaten some of the league's elite teams."

Both teams are in less than perfect health.

The Giants are missing All-Pro cornerback Mark Haynes and starting guard Billy Ard, both on injured reserve with knee injuries. Kenny Daniel, who joined the Giants from the United States Football League's Oakland Invaders, will replace Haynes and the Giants have moved Brad Benson from tackle to Ard's guard spot and re-inserted rookie William Roberts at left tackle.

The Rams also have problems in the secondary, where strong safety Nolan Cromwell has been replaced by Vince Newsome, and on the defensive line, where veteran Jack Youngblood is questionable.

Seattle's Knox earns Coach of Year award

NEW YORK (AP) — Chuck Knox, who lost star running back Curt Warner to injury in the season's first game but still led the Seattle Seahawks to a 12-4 record and a wild-card spot in the National Football League playoffs, was named on Thursday The Associated Press Coach of the Year.

The 52-year-old Knox took over the Seahawks in 1983 after 10 years with the Los Angeles Rams and Buffalo, and led Seattle to a 9-7 record, their first playoff berth and an upset playoff victory over the Miami Dolphins. But he outdid even that this season.

Knox was selected in balloting by three writers or broadcasters covering each of the NFL's 28 teams. He finished with 48 votes to 11 for Dan Reeves of Denver. They were followed by Don Shula of Miami, Bill Walsh of San Francisco, and Bill Parcells of the New York Giants.

Considered a contender at season's start, the Seahawks were written off when Warner, who had rushed for 1,449 yards as a rookie, was lost for the season with a knee injury suffered in a 33-0 victory over Cleveland.

CHUCK KNOX
Crafted Seattle's 12-4 mark

So Knox, known for his run-oriented "Ground Chuck" offense, turned to a passing offense featuring the combination of Dave Krieg to Steve Largent and rookie Darryl Turner, and relied on a half-dozen different running backs, depending on the situation. His leading rusher, David Hughes, gained only 327 yards for the season.

Holiday hoops at CSI

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Recreation Department and College of Southern Idaho will sponsor free-play basketball during the Christmas holidays at the CSI gymnasium.

The gym will be open Dec. 26-29 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. No black-soled tennis shoes or any footwear other than sneakers will be allowed on the court.

Because a construction project around the gym will also be in progress, everybody attending must enter the gym through the lower ramp.

Hogeboom inks Cowboys pact

HOUSTON (AP) — Dallas quarterback Gary Hogeboom has signed a new three-year contract with the Cowboys, his agent said Thursday.

Hogeboom, who started at quarterback early in the season only to be replaced by veteran Danny White, signed the contract Wednesday, according to his agent, Joe Courrege.

"It was for the next three years," Courrege said in an interview with radio station KIKK. "I won't disclose the terms."

But Courrege said the terms of the contract were worked out earlier in the season.

Both White and Hogeboom have said they would like to be the starter or else be traded.

Rangers sign hurler Hooton

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers signed right-handed pitcher Burt Hooton to a contract that could extend through the 1987 season, General Manager Tom Grieve said Thursday.

The 34-year-old Hooton's contract is for two years, with a one-year option, Grieve said. No other terms were disclosed.

Hooton, a native of Greenville, Texas, went through the recent free agent re-entry draft after 10 seasons with the Los Angeles Dodgers. He was 3-6 with a 3.44 earned run average and had four saves in 54 games with the Dogers last season.

Hooton, who compiled a 112-84 record with the Dodgers, "will be an important member of our pitching staff in 1985," Grieve said.

Celts' McHale finally sidelined

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics' forward-center Kevin McHale, who hasn't missed a game in his five-year National Basketball Association career, is expected to be sidelined for at least two games with partially torn ligaments in his left ankle.

Celtics' trainer Ray Melchiorre said Thursday that McHale, who has played in 413 consecutive regular-season and playoff games, was hurt in the third quarter of Wednesday night's 107-92 loss to Milwaukee. X-rays Thursday revealed the extent of the injury.

Melchiorre said that after three or four days McHale's return would be evaluated on a day-to-day basis.

In 26 games this season, McHale is averaging 17.6 points and 9 rebounds.

Bouts for ex-Olympic boxers

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mark Breland will fight Marlon Palmer Jan. 5, and Evander Holyfield will fight Eric Winbush Jan. 20 in two nationally televised six-round bouts from Harrah's Marina Hotel Casino.

Promoter Dan Duva of Main Events said the Breland-Palmer welterweight bout would be shown live and a six-round super middleweight bout on the same card between Virgil Hill and John Tyrell would be tape-delayed by ABC.

Holyfield-Winbush, a light heavyweight matchup, and two six-round lightweight matchups involving Meldrick Taylor against Dwight Pratchett and Pernell Whitaker against Keith Stevenson will be shown live as part of ABC's lead-in to Super Bowl XIX.

Breland, from New York, Taylor, of Philadelphia, and Whitaker, from Norfolk, Va., were gold medalists at the Summer Olympic Games. Hill, of Grand Forks, N.D., won a silver medal and Holyfield, from Atlanta, was awarded A bronze. Each made a successful professional debut last month at Madison Square Garden.

Jerome wrestlers edge Minico, 33-31

JEROME — In a rarity in high school athletics, both coaches were happy with the outcome of a dual wrestling match Thursday night.

Jerome Coach Tim Matthews was the happiest because his Tigers won 33-31 over the Minico Spartans. But Minico Coach Brad Cooper, after giving up the final 12 points of the night on forfeits, said, "I'm tickled to death."

Matthews was pleased because of winning "an exceptional bout" in the 126-pound class. In that one, Brent Egbert defeated Kory Thurston 17-7.

"The Minico wrestler beat Brent's brother last year and I figured it would be tough to beat him this year with a young man. But Brent got it done and that was the difference."

Cooper said the main reason for his satisfaction was "our younger kids are coming on. They came up here to wrestle tonight and they gave Jerome about as much as they wanted. This Jerome is a tough team."

Glenns Ferry wins mat triangular

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Bulldogs dropped a triangular wrestling match to Glenns Ferry 36-27 Thursday night, but came back to defeat Declo 42-22.

Kimberly Coach Pat Valliant said his squad's contest with the Pilots could have gone either way if it hadn't been for several unexpected losses.

Bulldog Dwight Humphreys, in the 119-pound division, had a chance to tie the match for Kimberly with a 5-2 lead over Shawn Sterling, but the Glenns Ferry grappler reversed and pinned Humphreys at the 5:15 mark. Also, Valliant expected a victory from Curt Wormsbaker in the 126-pound division.

The Bulldogs victory over Declo was "sweet revenge" according to Valliant, since Declo had soundly defeated Kimberly last season.

Order determined for '85 NFL draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The Houston Oilers and Cincinnati Bengals each will have two first-round picks at the National Football League's annual college draft April 30, New Orleans and Seattle will have none in the opening round.

The Oilers, who finished the 1984 season with a 3-13 record, have the second pick in the round, behind the Buffalo Bills, whose 2-14 record was the worst in the league.

Houston also has New Orleans' first-round pick, No. 11 overall, as a result of the trade that sent running back Earl Campbell to the Saints.

The Bengals, 8-8, have their own pick, No. 13, plus Seattle's choice in the first round, the completion of a 1983 trade in which the Seahawks acquired center Blair Bush. The number pick Cincinnati gets depends on how the Seahawks fare in the playoffs.

In determining the draft order, ties are broken by employing the oppositions' composite records. Thus, Houston picks second and Minnesota, also 3-13, is third because the Oilers' opponents had a weaker percentage, .512, compared to the combined .533 mark of the teams which played the Vikings.

KC's Mass named top rookie defender

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bill Maas says two injuries, to his left leg put a damper on an otherwise banner rookie year. It wasn't enough, though, to prevent him from being named Associated Press Rookie Defensive Player of the Year in the National Football League.

A hairline fracture in the lower part of Maas' left leg, sustained in the seventh game, kept Maas out of two games altogether and sent him limping to the sidelines several times in obvious pain.

Academics part of Georgia probe?

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — An NCAA investigation of the University of Georgia football program extends into academics, a former football player at the school who has been questioned by the NCAA told the Gwinnett Daily News.

In a copyright story published Thursday, the newspaper said National Collegiate Athletic Association investigators interviewed Tyrone Sorrells in October about his recruitment and academic treatment at Georgia.

Sorrells, who entered Georgia on a football scholarship in 1982, transfered to Georgia Tech last summer. NCAA officials, who also are investigating the Bulldogs' men's and women's basketball programs, contacted Tech in October seeking permission to talk with the former tight end.

"They asked me a lot of stuff about recruiting violations, how I was treated, why I transferred," Sorrells said of the October interview. "Once they found out I wasn't too involved in the material stuff, we mostly talked about academics.

"They said they might be getting back to me, but so far I haven't heard a thing from them," Sorrells said, adding that he was told by the investigator not to talk with the news media "about the specifics" of his interview.

Asked if he received extra money or other inducements to play football at Georgia, Sorrells said, "I cannot comment on any favors . . . I can't talk about anything gainful."

Sorrells said the academic program in which Georgia officials placed him was "an insult to my intelligence."

"I feel like I was very honest with the guy from the NCAA," he said. "I told him my bad points. I told him I wasn't a super student, but that I was willing to do the work.

"But I wasn't given a chance to do anything at Georgia. I was put at a level below my intelligence. My grades weren't bad, but my classes at Georgia were."

Boise trio accused of bookmaking

BOISE (AP) — Three Boise men are scheduled to be arraigned next month in connection with an alleged gambling ring in which authorities say bookies took bets on professional football games.

Jim Sevy, whose wife owns C-V's Corner bar; Wayne Jones, a bartender at C-V's; and Kenny Smith each have been charged with racketeering and bookmaking, according to papers filed in 4th District Court by the Ada County prosecutor's office.

Sevy was accused of allowing bookmaking to take place in C-V's during those months, of accepting a betting card and money, and referring a potential bettor to Jones.

The complaint charged Smith with taking bets on the results of professional football games. It also said Smith's home was filled with books, papers and paraphernalia related to bookmaking.

At a preliminary hearing Nov. 15, 4th District Magistrate George Carey found probable cause to have the men charged. They will be arraigned Jan. 7 before District Judge Deborah Bail.

"I feel the charges are completely ridiculous and I figure it's malicious prosecution," Sevy said Wednesday.

Police Sgt. Ron Phelps said investigations by federal, state and local agencies went on for nearly a year. Police believe up to several hundred people made bets in the arrangement, and that some bets were for more than $500, Phelps said.

Another amazing feat for Gretzky

WAYNE GRETZKY
Speeds to 1,000-point plateau

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — At age 23, the Edmonton Oilers' Wayne Gretzky already holds 37 National Hockey League records.

But the one that means the most for now is the 37th, the one the superb center set against the Los Angeles Kings Wednesday night by gaining his 1,000th point faster than anyone else.

"This one was different," Gretzky said after scoring two goals and collecting four assists to push his career point total to 1,005 in 424 games as the Oilers beat the Kings 7-3.

"This one was for me," he said. "I remember what some high-profile people said when I first broke in, that I was too small, too slow . . . and, well, we've heard all the other things. I felt if I kept playing the way I did, then over a period of time I would prove them wrong."

Before Gretzky, Guy Lafleur had reached the 1,000-point plateau faster than any other player, doing it in 720 games with the Montreal Canadiens.

Lafleur, whose wife was about to give birth, was unavailable for comment. But other 1,000-point scorers were, and they heaped praise on Gretzky, who did the trick not only faster but at a younger age than any other player.

Bobby Hull, who needed twice as many games (909) to reach 1,000, said Gretzky came along when hockey needed a change. And "he accepted the challenge. He has a fantastic style and is about four steps ahead of everybody.

"He knows the people have paid good money to watch him perform. He always gets physically and mentally ready," Hull said.

Gordie Howe, who collected his 1,000th NHL point in November 1960, three months before Gretzky was born, said the young center "fights for excellence."

Ketchum-Sun Valley stops Mushers for 1st varsity victory

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

FAIRFIELD — Ketchum-Sun Valley basketball Coach Mike Wade looked a little surprised Thursday night when folks stopped by after the Cutthroats' 49-46 victory over host Camas County and congratulated him on his defense.

"This is obviously, the first time you've seen us play," he said. "Usually we get blown out by 40 points. This is our fifth game, but this is the first game we played defense."

The Cutthroats secured their first-ever varsity boys basketball victory in the opening round of the Camas County Classic and will join Dietrich in one semifinal tonight. The defending tournament champion Jerome junior varsity will take on Gooding State in the other semifinal while Carey and Owyhee, Nev., will meet in one loser-out game with Camas County facing Gethesemene Christian School of Idaho Falls in the other consolation matchup.

The three other teams in the winners bracket got there more easily than the Cutthroats. Dietrich dumped Gethesemene 78-66, Jerome juniors beat Carey 55-44 and Gooding State outlast Owyhee 69-57.

Ketchum used a two-three zone throughout the game, effectively keeping Camas' shooters away from the basket. But the quickness of the Mushers' Carl Ashmead almost made that academic. Ashmead accounted for four steals, three in the second half, and twice cut Ketchum's lead to three points. But the Mushers turned the ball over twice in the last seven seconds and never had the chance to tie the game.

"This is a brand new defense tonight for us," said Wade. "It's the first time we tried it and it's the first thing that's worked for us."

Ketchum took a 25-16 halftime lead, partly on the strength of center Ned Klinglehoffer, who scored 12 points and pulled down five rebounds. But part of the Cutthroats' first-half success was keeping Camas out of shooting range — the Mushers hitting just eight of 25 shots before intermission.

In the second half, Camas applied defensive pressure and whittled away Ketchum's advantage. It was within five at the end of the third quarter and two in the final stanza. But Klinglehoffer chipped in 10 points in the last period, mostly on driving layins which provided the Cutthroats' margin of victory. He ended the game with 24 points while Ashmead picked up 10.

Dietrich got 23 points each from Bill Southwick and Alan Stoddard enroute to its victory over Gethesemene. But it, too, had some harrowing moments. The Idaho Falls school cut the deficit to as little as seven points midway through the final quarter before three of its starters fouled out.

Gooding State got 25 points from senior Todd Kimmes, who also accounted for 18 rebounds, as the Redskins handled Owyhee. Gooding State dominated the boards, which negated a 25-point performance by the Braves' Brad McKinney.

Jerome got points from eight different plays in beating Carey, coming back from a two-point halftime deficit to outscore the Panthers 23-15 in the second half.

Travis Dalton led the Tigers with 12 points, while Carey got 16 from Chad Jolley.

Tonight's Ketchum-Dietrich game will begin at 8:30 p.m., preceded by the Gooding State-Jerome contest. Carey, will meet Owyhee at 4 p.m., followed by the Camas-Gethsemene game at 5:30.

Gooding bests Buhl, 58-47

GOODING — Gooding took charge early Thursday night, rushing into a 19-4 lead over cold-shooting Buhl and coasting into a 58-47 non-conference victory.

Although all the starters scored for the Senators in the early blitz, John Yore set the pace with six points.

Gooding appeared capable of returning the big advantage when it went six minutes with just four points in the second quarter. Alan Thornsberry picked up six points but the Indians were unable to get closer than nine points. Gooding picked up six closing points for a 27-14 halftime lead.

Gooding pushed that advantage to 19 points at one stage of the third quarter and still have 15 to spare going into the final eight minutes.

Twice Buhl, which dropped its sixth straight outing, chipped back to within nine in the early fourth quarter but Swen Swenson and Yore hit points that moved the Senators back on top by 15 with 2:40 to play. From then on the Senators feasted at the foul line with 10 straight. Buhl hit two three-pointers to end the game.

Shoshone 75, Murtaugh 32

SHOSHONE — Indian sophomore George Shimer came off the bench to score 14 points, 12 in the second half, and lead Shoshone to a 75-32 non-conference victory over Murtaugh Thursday night.

Seniors Dorin Duffin and Charles Sandy joined Shimer in double figures with 14 and 10 points, respectively, as the Indians held Murtaugh to two points in the third quarter for the lopsided victory.

Shoshone Coach Larry Messick said the contest was tight in the second quarter, at 19-14 until the Indians applied more defensive pressure at the end of first half to break the Red Devils.

"The difference was our depth," Messick said. "We played nine kids and kept them fresh all the way."

The Shoshone Jayvees defeated Murtaugh 50-32.

The shorter Trojans stayed within five points of Hagerman through the first half. But in the third quarter the Pirates hit nine field goals and added 12 of 15 attempts from the line. That exploded them into a 65-47 lead at the rest and Raft River wasn't able to challenge.

Glenns Ferry surprises Bulldogs

GLENNS FERRY — The Glenns Ferry girls came up with a major surprise Thursday night, shooting well from the outside and upending the favored Kimberly Bulldogs 48-24.

"We shot extremely well from the outside and while we didn't do anything special on defense, all the girls worked very hard every minute," said Coach Sandra Fast. "We also tried to keep the tempo of the game up because we felt that would work to our advantage."

The Pilots got balanced scoring from their starters, headed by Kelly King's 15-point effort, in running their Canyon Conference record to 4-4. It was Kimberly's second loop loss of the year.

Valley 57, Declo 53

HAZELTON — The Valley girls staved off a closing bid by Declo to protect a near game-long lead and collect a 57-53 Canyon Conference victory Thursday night.

After a tight first half, Valley, getting good assist passing from Janice Holstine to Collette Sammons and Kimberly Kohtz, jumped ahead by as much as 10 points in the third and early fourth quarters.

Perhaps the turning point came after Declo had chipped to within three points with just over two minutes left. The Hornets, who managed just 9 of 23 from the foul line, then missed two free throws. They then fouled Holstine who dropped in both charities and snuff out the rally.

Valley won the preliminary 38-33.

Oakley 58, Burley 57

OAKLEY — The Oakley girls, catching a spark off full-court pressure and the shooting of Sherry Judd, came from 15 points of the pace to nip Burley 58-57 Thursday night.

Burley appeared heading for an easy victory when it moved up by 49-34 at the third-quarter buzzer. But Oakley Coach Don Tompkins put his charges into the press and the results were immediately.

The Hornets picked up several steals and more turnovers while Judd, held to two points, suddenly bloomed with 16. Oakley caught up and went ahead by three points with 2:33 remaining but it had to get free throws from Judd and Kay Poulton to nail down the victory as Burley refused to wilt.

MALTA — Paced by the rebounding and 22-point effort of sophomore Melodie Jones, the Raft River girls turned back Hagerman 40-32 Thursday night.

Washington rips BSU

SEATTLE (AP) — Sophomore center Chris Welp scored 19 of his game-high 23 points in the first half Thursday night as seventh-ranked Washington defeated Boise State 79-53 in a non-conference college basketball game.

The Huskies, 5-0, took the lead for good at 8-6 on Welp's basket with 15:58 left in the first half. Welp had eight first-half rebounds.

Washington steadily pulled away and led by as much as 30 points in the closing minutes.

The taller Huskies, dominating the game inside with superior rebounding and intimidating defense, also got 19 points from senior forward Detlef Schrempf, who blocked three shots in the early minutes of the game.

In the first half, Washington built a 42-28 lead as the Huskies hit .73 percent from the floor, while the Broncos shot just 38 percent.

In the second half, Washington got its fast break rolling and at one point reeled off 12 straight points to break the game open with a 59-36 lead with just over 13:30 to play.

Utah defeats Nevada-Reno

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Junior guard Kelvin Upshaw scored 23 points to lead Utah to an 84-75 non-conference basketball victory over Nevada-Reno Thursday night.

Upshaw was assisted by fellow guard Manuel Hendrix, who scored 16 points and Jerry Stroman with 13. Greg Dodd, a freshman center in his first start of the year, added 11.

Utah jumped out to an early lead and never trailed after breaking a 2-2 tie. Powered by Hendrix' 12 first-half points, Utah led 44-32 at intermission. The Utes stretched their lead to its widest margin, 52-36, midway through the second half on a layup by Upshaw.

Nevada Reno fought back to within four on the inside play of Ed Porter and the outside shooting of High. Porter muscled in at 9:39 to score and close the gap to 66-62.

But Utah then scored eight unanswered points and the game was never again close.

Swap with Bucs brings family affair to Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Son and infielder Dale Berra was united with father, Hall of Famer and Manager Yogi Berra Thursday as the New York Yankees made a trade with the Pittsburgh Pirates that created an unprecedented situation in baseball.

Finally with the approval of the baseball commissioner's office, the Yankees announced a trade that had been brewing since the winter meetings two weeks ago. In the deal, the Yankees acquired Dale Berra, left-handed pitcher Alphonso Pulido and outfielder Jay Buhner from the Pirates for outfielder Steve Kemp, infielder Tim Foli and $800,000.

The cash is to help the Pirates make part of the deferred payments on Kemp's $1 million per year contract, the player's agent, Dick Moss, said. The cash portion of the deal needed approval from the commissioner's office since it exceeded $400,000.

"In the dugout if most players are calling him 'Skip,' and I'm calling him 'Dad,' I don't know how that will go over with the other players," Dale said at a news conference Thursday afternoon to announce the deal. "But if I start a double play or something, I don't think they'll be thinking the ball came from the manager's son."

"He'll just be another player with me," Yogi said. "If he can play, he plays. If he can't, he sits."

Berra, 28, played shortstop for the Pirates in 1984, hitting .222 with nine homers and 52 RBI in 136 games. Pulido and Buhner are minor leaguers. Kemp hit .291 with seven home runs and 41 RBI as a parttime player for the Yankees last season. Foli rejoins the Pirates, with whom he played shortstop for three seasons from 1979-81.

The Yogi-Dale tandem is the first time a full-time manager has had his son on the roster.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"It's just as sure a recipe for failure to have the right idea 50 years too soon as five years too late."
— J.R. Platt.

South had the right idea in playing clubs before diamonds; he just went about it in the wrong way.

South won the first spade and East's takeout double warned him that the missing key cards were with East. This fact dictated that South play clubs before diamonds to take nine tricks: four clubs, two spades, two hearts and the diamond ace. (If he plays diamonds first, defenders will cash spade winners when South tries to develop a club winner.)

Quickly South led a club to dummy's jack and East's ace, and another spade knocked out South's last stopper. When South tried to run the clubs, East put up a barrier and the game fell one short.

South was right to lead clubs first but not in the way he did. Instead, he should have led a heart to dummy's ace and led a low club from dummy. East would have been forced to duck and South's queen would have won. With a club trick home before the second spade stopper was gone, South could now switch to diamonds, assuring four more winners.

Knowing where the key cards are is one thing. Doing something with the knowledge is another.

ANSWER: One spade. Bid the other major in search of the 4-4 fit. If spades and diamonds were interchanged, the raise to two hearts would be best.

Norton Buffalo lets harmonica do the talking

By SCOT KERSGAARD
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Norton Buffalo should not need any introduction. But a life outside the spotlight is a matter of choice for Buffalo, who is considered in some circles to be the world's finest harmonica player.

If Buffalo had chosen a more common path, his name might be better known, but he probably would not be bringing his band to Ketchum's Creekside Bar and Grill this Friday and Saturday.

A member of the Steve Miller Band since 1975, he has also recorded two albums of his own and played on more than 30 others with such people as Bonnie Raitt, Bette Midler, the Marshall Tucker Band, the Doobie Brothers, Judy Collins and America.

In addition to his lengthy musical credits, Buffalo is an actor and has appeared in both the Rose and Heaven's Gate. Working on Heaven's Gate had more than a passing effect on his life. He says the six months he spent on the film's Montana set helped turn him into a country boy. When the filming was over he bought the horse he had ridden in the movie.

"Living in Montana convinced me that I didn't need the city," he says. "Living in the country changes your perspective."

Buffalo lives near Sonoma, Calif., but he acknowledges he could probably make more money and enjoy greater commercial success if he lived in Los Angeles.

"But I've gotten comfy living in the country where I can see the trees and ride my horses. I have chosen to do that even though I have the ability to make it in the dog-eat-dog world," he says. "I don't want to wear boxing gloves, I'd rather be happy."

When Buffalo puts the harp to his lips his happiness becomes contagious. The audience, Buffalo, and the harmonica share in a transformation of spirit.

For Buffalo, it is the pure exhilaration of doing something absolutely as it ought to be done; of doing it perhaps better than it has ever been done before.

For the audience, nearly everyone has picked up a harmonica and held it to their mouth. Many are even able to play it with some success, but few even imagine that it can be played as well as Buffalo plays it. In his hands, the lowly mouth harp becomes a major instrument.

When he played in two Hailey concerts with the Miller band last winter, he matched Miller note for note and often took the lead himself. Very few rock bands have ever given that much play to the harmonica, fewer still have had someone so able to play it.

Legendary rock-bluesman Michael Bloomfield told Rolling Stone magazine, in a 1976 interview, that Buffalo was the best harmonica player he had ever heard. In the same Rolling Stone article, Miller calls Buffalo "brilliant."

He has gotten better since then.

If Buffalo is indeed today's best harmonicist, it is no accident. His father blew the harp and started Buffalo playing when he was eight years old. He began winning music awards shortly thereafter.

"My uncle scored the 'Wizard of Oz' movie," Buffalo recounts. "That's the kind of stuff I grew up with." It is the same kind of stuff his kids are growing up with.

His career began in earnest in the early '70s when Commander Cody (George Frayne) hired him to play with Cody and the Lost Planet Airmen on their last tour and the Farewell Album.

When Buffalo recorded the first album of his own, Lovin' in the Valley of the Moon, in 1977, it was named best folk, country, or bluegrass album of the year by the Bay Area Music Awards.

He is one of the Wood River Valley's favorite acts and always draws a crowd of enthusiastic locals and tourists. Both shows begin at 9 p.m. Ticket information is available by calling Creekside at 726-8200.

Kerouac remembrance slated for publication

By TERRY RICH HARTLEY
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Hailey-based Limberlost Press is publishing "Gone in October: Last Reflections on Jack Kerouac" by John Clellon Holmes in January.

Publisher Rick Ardinger says, "Gone in October" is a collection of four essays Holmes wrote over the years of his friendship with beat generation novelist Kerouac, best known for his novel, "On The Road."

"The timing is appropriate," says Ardinger, "because the beat generation is experiencing a renaissance right now and Kerouac is kind of a cult figure of that generation."

Ardinger says that all 18 Kerouac novels, written between 1952 and his death in 1969, are now in print as well as much of his poetry. And, though he was a native of New England, Ardinger says the author was considered a Western writer because Colorado and California provided the setting for many of his books.

"This book is important because Holmes was always thought to be the person to write on Kerouac," Ardinger says, adding that five biographies have been written on Kerouac but that Holmes was much closer to the writer than the other biographers, having known him since 1948 when they were struggling, young writers.

Ardinger says the book is going to be about 100 pages of essays concerning Holmes and Kerouac's mutual New England background, their struggles as writers in post-World War II America, attending Kerouac's funeral with poets Allen Ginsberg and Gregory Corso, and reflections on the 25th anniversary celebration of the publication of "On The Road" that took place in Boulder, Colo., in 1982.

"Gone in October" was possible in part because of a grant from the Idaho Commission on the Arts, says Ardinger. It is available for $7.50 from Limberlost Press, P.O. Box 771, Hailey 83333 or Ardinger says it will be at some Magic Valley bookstores.

Don Henley, a new album behind him, relaxes in the den of his home in Los Angeles

Don Henley's lyrics follow tradition of symbolic music

By ROBERT HILBURN
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — It is easy to figure out the lyrics of most pop songs because they are so literal. Stevie Wonder really is just calling to say he loves you in his latest hit. But the most intriguing lyrics involve metaphors and symbolism in ways that invite — and at times defy — dissection.

Consider Don Henley's new single, the nostalgic-sounding "The Boys of Summer."

First some background: Henley's first solo album in 1982, "I Can't Stand Still," was a widely acclaimed, richly introspective work that sold a respectable 700,000 copies and produced a Top 5 single in "Dirty Laundry," a blistering slap at the sensationalism of TV news.

But Henley reached only a fraction of the audience with the LP that he commanded in the late '70s, when his band, the Eagles, was America's biggest-selling rock group. The Los Angeles-based quintet's "Hotel California" sold nearly 8 million copies.

With this in mind, it is tempting to think of "The Boys of Summer" as a reflection on the conflict between the emotional desire to regain that popularity and the rational realization that it is best to simply concentrate now on doing the best work that you can.

These lines in "The Boys of Summer" suggest the urge to compete with the past.

I never will forget those nights
I wonder if it was a dream
Remember how I made you scream?
Now I don't understand what happened to our love
But babe, I'm gonna get you back
I'm gonna show you what I'm made of

Here is how you can interpret the lyrics to fit the Eagles scenario: There was always a summer quality to the Eagles' seductive, Southern-California-accented music. The Eagles broke up because the pressure of living up to "Hotel California's" success made everyone a little crazy. Fans screamed in concert, and love is a metaphor for the emotional bond between fans and artists, right?

'Cop' is leading holiday movies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Beverly Hills Cop" handcuffed the competition for the second straight week, including such newcomers as "Starman" and "The Cotton Club," and was the favorite to become the Christmas season's runaway movie hit.

The action comedy starring Eddie Murphy as a down-in-the-heel Detroit cop plying his trade in opulent Beverly Hills grossed $11.5 million at 1,532 theaters in the U.S. and Canada from Friday through Sunday, Paramount Pictures said.

That was a 24 percent decline from its opening weekend, but still kept the movie on a $3 million-a-day pace to stay far ahead of the competition with $36.5 million after 12 days, Paramount said.

Tuesday's edition of the entertainment newspaper Daily Variety noted that one out of every three movie tickets sold over the weekend was for "Beverly Hills Cop." And Paramount said it would up the stakes Wednesday by putting the movie into 474 more theaters for what the studio said was a record 2,006-screen release.

But the movie will have to battle some other big-name releases beginning next weekend, including: "The Flamingo Kid," "Johnny Dangerously," "Protocol," "Pinocchio," "Micki & Maude" and "Breakin' 2 Electric Boogaloo."

"It's shaping up as a very strong Christmas," said A. Alan Friedberg, head of the Boston-based Sack Theaters chain.

"The Christmas season really begins in earnest right after Christmas dinner, and then every day is Saturday," Friedberg noted.

"Beverly Hills Cop" overshadowed a strong opening weekend for "Dune," the movie based on the classic science fiction novel by Frank Herbert. "Dune" was a distant No. 2 with $6 million at 915 theaters, Daily Variety said.

A couple of 2-week-old movies — "City Heat" and "2010" — held down third and fourth places with $4.3 million and $4.1 million, respectively.

At No. 5 was another new film, "The Cotton Club," director Francis Coppola's lavish musical look at 1930s Harlem. The movie attracted $2.9 million at 808 theaters in its first three days and still had a long way to go to overcome its $47 million production cost.

"Starman," the "E.T."-like movie starring Jeff Bridges as an alien abandoned on earth, drew $2.9 million at 1,261 theaters, while "Runaway," starring TV private eye Tom Selleck, found only $1.2 million at 720 theaters.

Here are the top grossing films over the weekend, with distributor, weekend gross, total gross and number of weeks in release.

"Beverly Hills Cop," Paramount, $11.5 million, $36.5 million, two weeks.

"Dune," Universal, $6 million, first week.

"City Heat," Warner Bros., $4.3 million, $12.7 million, two weeks.

"2010," MGMUA, $4.1 million, $13.9 million, two weeks.

"The Cotton Club," Orion, $2.9 million, first week.

"Starman," Columbia, $2.9 million, first week.

"Runaway," Tri-Star, $1.2 million, first week.

"The Terminator," Orion, $955,973, $32.8 million, eight weeks.

CLINT EASTWOOD
Parodies tough cop roles

'City Heat' relies on its stars, not plot

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

Film review

TWIN FALLS — It's a common practice among Hollywood folk to package two big stars into one big movie.

Never mind that the story is not as big as the stars. Never mind that the entertainment value is not as big as the stars. Just so long as the box office is as big as the stars.

"City Heat" falls into that genre. It stars those two macho biggies of the screen, Burt Reynolds and Clint Eastwood, in a cops-and-robbers caper set during Prohibition.

Reynolds dons his usual Smokey the Bandit demeanor for his role as a wise-cracking private detective named Mike Murphy.

Clint is his usual Dirty Harry self as worn gumshoe, Lt. Speer, who is a former police and sparring partner of Murphy's.

Lt. Speer and Murphy don't have much of a plot to follow in "City Heat." There is a formless outline that puts them in the middle of a gang rivalry over some missing criminal ledgers.

Mostly, the story just is a showcase in which to give the stars room to do what they do best. For Reynolds that means being charming and showing his teeth a lot. Nothing too different from his other movies except that he's wearing a trenchcoat in this one.

As for Clint, he's has a little more fun with a parody of the hard cop with the big guns he created in his other movies. He grits his teeth a lot in this movie.

The supporting players are class all the way, although Jane Alexander is wasted as Murphy's secretary. Among all of the cast, Rip Torn turns in an extra nice bit as a head thug.

The film was directed by Richard Benjamin and is a bit of a disappointment after "My Favorite Year." It must be hard to come up with two good movies in a row. But who's expected to look closely at the direction and movie-making techniques plot when you have Burt and Clint to look at?

It's totally acceptable to overlook the fact that "City Heat" uses every cliche from every gangster movie ever made or that it has all the consistency of bathtub gin because Eastwood and Reynolds fill the screen.

"City Heat" does, after all, provide some laughs, it's breezy entertainment and Clint and Burt make a snappy team.

NBC's ascendancy in prime time creates upheaval in TV networks

By DREW FETHERSTON
Newsday

The upheaval in prime time this year has been of almost biblical proportions, and if the last is not yet first, it is at least a respectable second.

NBC, which has been mired in third place in the ratings since the middle of the last decade, now finds itself second, comfortably ahead of a stunned ABC. Not bad for a network that has seen seven of its nine new shows drubbed in the ratings.

Two successes for nine tries isn't quite as bad as it sounds; things were tough all over in the fall of 1984. CBS found only one winner among five new shows, "Murder, She Wrote"; ABC's eight new shows produced only one, "Finder of Lost Loves," with ratings that promised anything but quick death. And even "Finder of Lost Loves" may not last too long unless its ratings improve. January begins television's "second season," when prime-time shows that have performed poorly through the fall are given the coup de grace, and new series replace them.

The really alarming news is not the poor performance of most of the new shows; that has come to be expected. The networks this fall saw their share of the audience erode rapidly, thanks to cable and video cassette recorder use at home, from what it had been a year ago.

Despite the poor performance of this fall's new shows, experts expect relatively minimal schedule-tampering by the networks over the next several weeks; two or three hours by ABC, two by NBC, one or two by CBS.

Here is how the first season has gone so far:

The good news doesn't take long to tell: NBC's "The Cosby Show" is an authentic hit, credited with reviving the falling sitcom format and boosting the network's whole Thursday lineup. "Highway to Heaven," NBC's sweetness-and-light drama that stars Michael Landon as an earthbound angel, is holding its own against ABC's "The Fall Guy" and probably will survive.

CBS' "Murder, She Wrote" slipped from its early-season high ratings, but seems to be stabilizing at a level that will permit it to survive.

Harvey Shephard, CBS's senior vice president for programming, noted that all three of the successful new programs are "gentle shows. We had an abundance of hard-action shows when the season started, but they don't seem to be doing as well as 'Cosby,' 'Highway to Heaven' and 'Murder, She Wrote.'"

The rest of the new crop — and a few older shows that returned for perhaps one season too many — will require the help of someone like Michael Landon's angel if they are to last more than a few weeks. Taking it from the bottom — the worst cases — here is the list of likely victims:

NBC's "Partners in Crime" has been canceled, and its "Hot Pursuit" and "Hunter" are given almost no chance.

A little voice inside my head said, 'Don't look back. You can never look back...'
Those days are gone forever
I should just forget them but —

Aside from the wry joke about a Grateful Dead fan driving a new Cadillac, the lyrics underscore the importance of not getting into the trap of competing with your past.

Pretty neat analysis, eh?

Henley, sitting in the den of his hillside house, smiled when I outlined my interpretation.

No, he said patiently, he didn't have the Eagles in mind at all when he wrote the song (with Tom Petty's guitarist, Mike Campbell).

"I can see where you might think that," he said diplomatically — but the song is really about love.

The first section quoted above is about winning back an old romance. The second is a look at what happened to the '60s "love generation." Henley really did see a Deadhead sticker on a shiny new Cadillac.

"It's — like the peace-and-love generation has grown up to be coffee achievers," he joked. "Somewhere in the '70s, people turned from an outward vision to an inner vision. Instead of being concerned with social issues, they went inside themselves and said, 'I'm going to put on a coat and tie, go to work, make money and take care of me.' That sounded like a pretty tidy analysis too.

But Henley kept expanding on the lines in "The Boys of Summer," touching on the nation's obsession with youth and the unbending nostalgia for '60s music and '60s heroes.

"The Cadillac part turns the song into something else," Henley continued. "Suddenly, love turns out to be not just between a man and a woman, but the love (of fellow man) we talked about in the '60s.

"Was all that peace-and-love sentiment real or just sloganeering? I'm not sure the '60s were such a great thing. The love we talked about certainly didn't manifest itself in the '70s. In a way, the two elements come together — the one-to-one love and the social love. The song ends up with the guy thinking about the girl when she was back in the '60s and she had daisies around her head.

"At least, I think it does (come together at the end). I can't really explain this song. It just gives you a feeling. You can think whatever you want about it. It's left up to the listener." Exactly the point.

Invariably, songwriters I admire — from Bob Dylan and John Lennon to Joni Mitchell and John Prine — have trouble defining their songs.

Some songs — Lennon's "Imagine," Dylan's "Blowin' in the Wind" — are eloquent in their very simplicity, but the most compelling songs generally are the ones that lend themselves to multiple interpretation.

As co-writer of Eagles hits like "Hotel California," "Life in the Fast Lane" and "Sad Cafe," Henley specialized in this type of song. Where many pop figures examined the '60s, Henley was one of the few who came to grips with the self-absorption of the '70s, etching a portrait almost as telling on a pop-music scale as F. Scott Fitzgerald's examinations of the Jazz Age were on a literary one.

Henley's new album, "Building the Perfect Beast," continues those chronicles. Where his teaming with songwriter Danny Kortchmar worked smoothly on "I Can't Stand Still," the partnership is more clumsy this time musically. There are jarring, arbitrary edges to some of the tracks — as if Henley felt compelled to update his sound.

The themes, however, continue to be provocative and Henley's lyrics remain well-crafted and thoughtful. The themes range from the difficulties of commitment ("You Can't Make Love") to social implications of genetic engineering ("Building the Perfect Beast") to short-sighted foreign policy ("Drivin' With Your Eyes Closed").

Along with "The Boys of Summer," the most affecting song on the album is "Sunset Grill," which is in the Southern California landscape tradition of Eagles songs like "Hotel California" and "Sad Cafe."

There is a Sunset Grill — a hamburger stand on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood — and Henley uses the stand as a backdrop for his discussion of topics as disparate as pride in workmanship and decreasing social compassion for the poor.

Chiefly, however, the song extends the "you can't go home again" sentiment that underscored much of "Hotel California."

Timing of movies' releases creates a glut during holidays

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — It is the season of bloodshot eyes and distressed sacroiliacs. The great annual December glut is upon us, beloved of advertising departments and insatiable film fans, less beloved of film critics who have to write for the ages on deadlines better suited to coverage of wrecks and tornadoes.

"For your consideration," John Hurt said in some bemusement earlier this week; "everything is for your consideration." Hurt himself is in Los Angeles to ring a few chimes in behalf of one of our considerations, the film of George Orwell's "Nineteen Eighty-Four," that has opened unexpectedly for a week to qualify for the Oscar sweepstakes.

It testifies annually to the drawing power of Academy Award nominations, let alone the Oscars themselves, that distributors are willing to risk that solitary week of exposure, in last-minute bookings in whatever theaters had not been reserved a year ahead for a regular Christmas release, in the prayerful hope of luring Academy voters and generating some enthusiasm, the enthusiasm to pay off in a regular run in the new year.

The risks are that chilly reviews and all the distracting competition in the Christmas rush could defeat the object of the exercise, which is to get one or more nominations. The further risk is that even strongly favorable reviews will be forgotten when the film returns for its commercial run.

It is a kind of cinema roulette, played for big stakes, not for the dangerous fun of it, and there is a commercial logic to the glut, exasperating as it is for those who hate to see quiet, intense films of quality trampled underfoot (or have their quiet sounds drowned out) by the big, big, big-event films that have been designed with Christmas launchings in mind.

Will "Nineteen Eighty-Four" have a future in 1985? It is, not least, Richard Burton's last work in a feature film, and it is, in John Hurt's passionate belief, echoed by the critics, a performance that does high honor to Burton's memory.

"Greystoke," which opened early in the year, has been brought back for a week as a reminder that it too is an item for Academy consideration, most especially for Sir Ralph Richardson's brilliant supporting performance, his last. The film had other excellences, but Richardson, in a familiar guise as a foxy, quavery eccentric, lovable in the happiness the plot affords him at last, was even more than Tarzan himself the heart of it.

You have to hope that the Academy rises above its resistance (no longer total) to posthumous nominations. As the Academy voters should know better than anyone, good work in film is its own immortality.

Mark Rydell's "The River," which Universal, probably rightly, did not want to have its regular commercial run in direct competition with "Places in the Heart" and "Country," the others of that unique trio of films about strong, surviving farm wives, will play a week to qualify starting Wednesday. But it will commence its regular run, after only a brief hiatus, the second week in January, presumably before the momentum fades too badly.

"Mass Appeal," which is currently playing its qualifying week, is scheduled to return in February for its regular run. While there have been favoring reviews for the performances by Jack Lemmon as a congregation-pleasing priest, Zeljko Ivanek as a firebrand seminarian and Charles Durning as a reactionary monsignor (the most nominatable elements), the film as a whole has drawn very mixed notices. It will be interesting to see if the risk of the qualifying run pays off.

The blockbusters (as they are intended to be, whether or not any blocks get busted) — "Cotton Club," "Dune," "2010" — and the big, noisy comedies — "City Heat" and "Beverly Hills Cop" — are here. It is always an item of suspense whether the more solemn films, like "Nineteen Eighty-Four" and Alan Parker's "Birdy," which opens next week, stay visible in the crowd. I keep remembering that "King of Hearts" virtually suffocated in its original Christmas-season release, and had to be revived later with tender loving care applied by those who would not let it die.

David Lean's superb "A Passage to India," which is at once majestic and intimate, is a special case in this season. It seems assured its nominations, several by my guess, and you wait to see if in the jostling throng of epic fantasies and action comedies it beckons the audiences it deserves. "Gandhi" did, in the same circumstances exactly, and, with its backdrop of the seething Indian resentment at British rule, "A Passage to India" is a kind of prequel to Richard Attenborough's grand biography.

Meanwhile, the avid filmgoer can by year-end be forgiven for getting the farm couples momentarily scrambled, or seeing all the cops and ex-cops, Clint and Burt and Eddie and Tom, in one earsplitting shoot-out. A little calmer and more even distribution of any year's movie riches would be welcome.

'The River': drama aplenty, but is too shallow to succeed

Film review

By SHEILA BENSON
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — The struggles of a contemporary farm family, caught in a squeeze between unfriendly nature and unforgiving banks, is still a worthy subject for a film, "Country" notwithstanding. But while "Country" was leaden and anemic in turning events into drama, the last thing you could complain about in director Mark Rydell's "The River" is a lack of drama.

Opening with a really magnificently created flood sequence, from the first disarming drops to a muddy gray wall of lethal water, the filmmakers hand their heroic Tennessee family one of almost every disaster of nature — and screenwriting — except a typhoon and the Black Plague. Some disasters strike twice.

Crops fail. Pet livestock dies. Sears threatens. Old boy friends loom. The very lives of the Garveys — husband Mel Gibson and wife Sissy Spacek — are endangered. Repeatedly. They, and we, barely have time to dry out from the ruinous effects of the opening flood when the closing flood strikes. "The River" is Inspirational Misery at its fullest and most manipulative.

It is a great pity, since the dilemma of the individual farmer these days is an authentic and complex question, and since exceptional artistry has gone into the making of this film (in particular, Charles Rosen's production design, Sidney Levin's editing and Rydell's staging of the water sequences).

But unlike such real country films as "Places in the Heart" or "Tender Mercies," "The River" doesn't feel as though it grew from personal observation or from an inner need to tell a real story. This screenplay, by Robert Dillon and Julian Barry from Dillon's story, feels cut to fit what was seen to be the public's current interest in an important subject. It has no confidence in our capacity to discover subtleties. Between the screenplay and Rydell's pointed direction, we are constantly being told — to quote the production notes — "that this is a world in which unfeeling, callous men ride roughshod over humble, defenseless people." I'll say.

SISSY SPACEK
Plays a docile mother

developer Scott Glenn has plans to flood their bucolic valley to build a dam that will provide cheap hydroelectric power. The question is not money — the valley's farmers are being offered a reasonable price for their property — but the loss of generations-held acreage. Glenn, a childhood sweetheart of Spacek's (with the world's most docile and invisible wife), is also as willing to take Spacek away from all this as he is willing to take all this away from her. Scott's presence gives Gibson, characterized as a hothead and a loner, even more to brood and be jealous about.

Then "The River" broadens its range beyond the misery of the farmers to include the misery of factory workers as well. Gibson, almost crushed by their load of debts, takes the first job he can get to bring in money and finds that he's been recruited as a strikebreaker in a nearby steel mill.

It is certainly odd logic on the film makers' part, when they have a difficult, unlovable leading character, to put him to work as a scab — even as a learning experience. If Gibson is to be admired for his principles in standing up to agribusiness, what happened to those same principles when he takes the job of another man, however reluctantly, in this fashion? Also: Was strikebreaking the only job available in all of Tennessee?

The factory background sets the stage for the film's most jaw-dropping sequence as, from the surrounding countryside, a young deer walks straight into the foundry, straight toward its deafening noise, its heat, its streams of molten metal. (Presumably, with one shake of his little shoulders, the deer has shrugged off its placard reading "Symbol," ignoring what they must know, that any deer behaving like this would be rabid or a creation of Walt Disney, the sight of such primal innocence in such hellish surroundings brings out the finer qualities of all the factory's scabbing workers.

Meanwhile, Spacek is bravely handling the farm, with only her 12-year-old son, Shane Bailey, and a genuinely adorable 7-year-old daughter, Becky Jo Lynch. (Why does she know no one in the valley, not one friendly neighbor, anyone she can call on besides Scott Glenn?)

And even down on the farm, noble improbabilities reign: Spacek has a serious farm accident, one that could cost her her life. But when she and Gibson have one precious weekend together, a city-bound break from his strikebreaking, she carefully catalogues his every new bump and bruise, kissing them to make them all better. She does not even mention her almost-fatal accident, nor has it apparently left enough of a scar for him to notice. Farm-wife stoicism be damned; this is lunacy. And in between all this improbability is dialogue that is part daytime soap, part documentary film narration.

You feel more sorry for the actors than anything else. The film's very physical demands must have been harrowing, particularly the spectacular opening water-tractor action, which is actually a reworking of the one great scene from "Sometimes a Great Notion." Spacek is probably the most submissive and docile little farm wife since Luise Rainer in "The Good Earth."

Until you see him in "Mrs. Soffel," you might never have an inkling that Mel Gibson could act beyond a glower, and Scott Glenn, who is required to pop up more often than the villain in melodrama, probably does as well as could humanly be done in all this wretched excess. You wish them all good roles next time, and on higher ground.

Romero's zombies return for more

WAMPUM, Pa. (AP) — The zombies are back. And they're madder, meaner and more menacing than ever in George Romero's "Day of the Dead," the frightening finale to his horror film trilogy.

But this time, there's a good zombie in the lot — an indication that at least in the eyes of their creator, the outcasts from the nether world aren't as awful as they might first appear.

"I always liked the zombies," Romero said during a recent filming session at an underground limestone mine in western Pennsylvania. He smiled as dozens of the wild-eyed, mud and blood-encrusted creatures shuffled into a nearby dressing room, some of them stopping to shake his hand.

"I have a lot of sympathy for them. I think they're the most sympathetic characters in all three films. My zombies are ... just working Joes who can't find a way out of here," he said, laughing.

Romero's fans apparently find the zombies agreeable as well. Thousands of people applied for the approximately 800 zombie walk-on parts needed for scenes shot inside the mine; the chosen received $1 a day, a boxed lunch and a special cap for their efforts.

"It was really great to be a zombie. You tell somebody in the street and they say, 'Wow,'" said Joe Mazzella, 20, of Bronx, N.Y., founder of Romero's fan club, The New Dawn.

Like 1968's "Night of the Living Dead," and 1979's "Dawn of the Dead," also filmed near Pittsburgh, Romero's third film pits the living against the dead. It is a violent struggle that worsens over time.

Only 12 people are left at the start of "Day of the Dead," all of them hiding in an underground military installation in Florida from the human-eating zombies which have taken over the earth.

Most of the film's production is being done by Romero's Pittsburgh-based Laurel Entertainment, Inc., inside the cold, empty mine near Wampum, with a few segments filmed in Florida. The movie is expected to be released by next fall.

"Day of the Dead" is slightly more graphic than its predecessors, climaxing with a 15-minute scene certain to appeal to "gore fans," according to the 44-year-old Romero, the trilogy's writer and director.

Yet the horror is "so stylized and highly exaggerated that the film takes on the tone of a comic book," according to Richard P. Rubinstein.

L.M. Boyd What's what

Legal debate continues in England over whether a man should still have the right to the return of his engagement ring, if and when his bride elect calls off the wedding. Such a right has been the man's there for many generations. But the so-called new morality lends fresh argument to those who want the woman to keep the ring whatever happens. A spokesman for that point of view says, "The woman is not a record player that he can return to the shop for a refund after he has misused the machine for months."

A fundemental document of law, the U.S. Constitution, mentions only one crime. Ask your lawyer friend to name it. Correct. It's treason.

Chroniclers of historical figures have listed the occupation of Adam as "gardener."

SALUTE

Q. Why do Navy men always salute the quarterdeck when they step aboard a fighting ship?

A. In pagan times, the quarterdeck area was where the holy man conducted ceremonies to the gods. Later, it was where the colors flew. A long tradition, that one.

Ancient art suggests the first cowboys to rope bulls with lassos were Egyptians in the Valley of the Nile.

Q. Can the South American sloth wag its tail and wiggle its ears?

A. So you've been reading up on it. No tail, no ears.

"A woman who doesn't know how to flirt is like a rose without a scent." That, too, is in our Love and War man's file folder, waiting for a label.

EGGS AND SAUSAGES

You've read that egg buyers Boston want the brown-shelled variety while Chicago buyers like the white-shelled eggs. This difference in color preference turns up, too, in link sausages, wieners, hotdogs. In the Carolinas, orange casings sell best. In Kansas and Georgia, red casings. In Milwaukee, casings without any color at all.

Trying too hard can botch it up, all right. Experimenters put hungry rats in a tricky maze at the end of which was food. Those that hadn't eaten in 12 hours solved the route in about six tries. Most of those that hadn't eaten in 36 hours needed 20 tries, but some of the really hungry ones finally just sat down and wrung their paws.

Garcia Marquez's new is collection full of literary wonders

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
The Los Angeles Times

In a Paris Review interview, published in the latest Writers at Work collection, Gabriel Garcia Marquez said: "It always amuses me that the biggest praise for my work comes for the imagination, while the truth is that there's not a single line in all my work that does not have a basis in reality. The problem is that Caribbean reality resembles the wildest imagination ... actually I'm a very realistic person and write what I believe is the true socialist realism."

In his "Collected Stories," written between 1947 and 1972, an old male angel with filthy and lice-infested wings is kept on display in a crude backyard pen until he is at last able to fly away "with the risky flapping of a senile vulture."

A gigantic and ghostly ocean liner is visible only to a small boy until, to avenge himself on the doubters, he brings it crashingly aground in his village, with the great noise of 90,500 champagne glasses breaking "and the ancient and languid waters of the seas of death dripping down its sides."

"Blacaman the Good, Vendor of Miracles" is in truth as black-hearted a flimflam man as the world has known, but is done in by a disciple who renames him The Bad and seals him in an armored mausoleum, bringing him back to life should Blacaman try to avoid some of his eternal punishment.

Books

The beguiling aspect of the Garcia Marquez stories is that he is not, by his own lights, being coy, or twice fanciful, when he insists he is writing out of reality. His stories are undubitably the work of a fabulist's imagination, but the wellsprings are in the legends, folk tales, superstitions and indeed in the prevalence of miracles in the orthodox faith of Latin America.

The socialist realism is everywhere present as well; it is the arid, unyielding rock on which the tales are built, and from which the tales are an escape. The observed world is of poverty, hopelessness, exploitation, despotic and demonic rulers — tyrants in government or in ownership.

For a vignette of a story, the barber-dentist extracts an abscessed tooth from the hated mayor. "Shall I bill you or the village?" the dentist asks. "It's the same damn thing," the major says, and you hear the quick sharp edge to the voices, the mayor's and the author's. As elsewhere in Garcia Marquez, it is the bomb beneath the pillow, the stiletto in the sleeve.

Some of the stories have special interest because they offer glimpses of Macondo and the dynasty of Col. Aureliano Buendia, celebrated in full in "One Hundred Years of Solitude"; this novel, first published in Spanish in 1967, helped win Garcia Marquez the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1982.

Never, it may be, was a Nobel winner so enjoyable to read.

Garcia Marquez sometimes seems a litanist at heart, creating lists, at once absurd and surprising and exotic, that in the childhood observances of ancestral faith, might have been saints' names or catalogues of Marian virtues.

"Big Mama's Funeral" is a blackly funny recitation of the last days of a mammoth and tyrannical old woman, so powerful the pope himself came to her last rites. Big Mama on her deathbed begins to dictate the list of her invisible estate. It commences with "the wealth of the subsoil" and reaches to "the underprivileged classes and statements of political support," also including "liberal ladies, the meat problem and the purity of the language." Alas, before she could finish, "Big Mama emitted a large belch and expired." The earliest stories are fascinations with death, told through the consciousnesses of the dead, one of them a woman yearning for a taste of orange and realizing it's been 3,000 years between bites.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

"A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

G: General Audiences, all ages admitted.

PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

X: No one under 17 admitted.

All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Ronstadt's latest gamble pays off well

By JIM KELTON
The Everett Herald

Record review

The history of rock 'n' roll is filled with paper-thin merchandising gambits that paid off.

Pampered pussycats have been sold as petulant revolutionaries. Good-looking folks who literally could not sing a lick have had long-lasting careers — often simply because of the volume of tacky publicity that accompanied their debuts.

However, some things are truly difficult. It takes more than shrewdness and determination, for example, to make a dicey commercial ploy work aesthetically. In some extreme cases it takes ingenious demographic calculation, fortuitous artistic chemistry and possibly divine intervention.

Consider "Lush Life," a new album of torch songs by Linda Ronstadt:

Here is supper-club elegance from a singer who less than a decade ago was the queen of the country-rock scene; here are sentimental pop standards in an era of space-age technology and genetic engineering; here is a complete role-overhaul by one of the most prominent vocalists of her day; and here is success in every sense of the word.

With "Lush Life," Ronstadt does not just dabble in archaic material. She delved deeply into similar stuff a year ago with her "What's New" LP. But that record seemed to trade heavily on its novelty value. "Lush Life," though in the same vein, seems to touch something real.

Ronstadt never has been shy about revamping her image. She goes at it wholeheartedly. When her brand of country-rock faded, she turned to a tougher form of hard-edged pop. From there, she went on to sing

LINDA RONSTADT
Offers supper-club elegance

Gilbert and Sullivan in a celebrated production of "The Pirates of Penzance." She currently is preparing for her opera debut in "La Boheme."

She behaves as if very little is beyond her, and it is beginning to look as if she's right.

Of course, having the luxury of choosing suitable help and not having to sweat nickels and dimes doesn't exactly amount to a curse.

"Lush Life" was produced by Peter Asher (Ronstadt's longtime Svengali) and the music was arranged and conducted by Nelson Riddle, who played a key role in Frank Sinatra's triumphant 1950s foray into the same territory charted by "Lush Life."

The strange thing about all of this is that the campy pose Ronstadt has assumed in her torch-bearer incarnation (period fashions, packaging that reflects the art deco designs of the day) is a shameless contrivance that nevertheless packs an impressive punch.

Ronstadt comes on in the album art like a chirpy USO entertainer, but the music inside is so well tailored to her way with a ballad that there is no hint of gimmickry whatsoever. Her versions of "Skylark," "When I Fall in Love," "Sophisticated Lady," "Falling in Love Again" and (especially) the title number are utterly respectable interpretations of those songs.

They also are credible — if unlikely — extensions of her hip-cowgirl laments. They are softly and eloquently romantic.

"What's New" was a fine effort in this direction, but "Lush Life" is a full-fledged consummation of the process. It is good enough to renew interest in the entire body of standards that it so deftly and smartly recalls.

Famed home for children isn't forever

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — The City Council decided Wednesday to close Strawberry Field, the Salvation Army children's home immortalized by the Beatles.

The council, controlled by the Labor Party, approved a plan to phase out Strawberry Field over the next five years by not placing any new children there.

A Liberal council member, Paul Clarke, said, "The reason they are closing the home is because it is not owned by the council. They know full well that Strawberry Field offers a better environment to the children than the existing homes that are going to be retained."

Heather Adams, head of the council's Social Services Committee, said, "If what little residential care we need was in the hands of voluntary organizations we would have no control over the philosophy, policy or any change of direction those organizations might make. The decision has been made because of the decline in the number of children in care."

Strawberry Field inspired the Beatles hit based on the late John Lennon's childhood memories of Liverpool, the northwest England port city where the group first performed together.
